2010 CENSUS RESULT

CNMI population down 22.2 pct.

» From 69,221 in 2000 to 53,883 in 2010

REPORTER

The CNMI population shrunk by 22.2 percent or by 15,338 in a 10-year period, the U.S. Census Bureau reported yesterday.

From 69,221 in 2000, the Commonwealth's population decreased to 53,883 on April 1, 2010, resulting from a host of factors that include a series of economic setbacks, the demise of the garment industry, and the unremitting drop in tourist arrivals.

Some 89 percent of the CNMI's total population of 53,883 is on Saipan with 48,220, followed by Tinian with 3,136, then Rota with 2,527.

The Census Bureau conducts a census every 10 years, as mandated by the U.S. Constitution. The CNMI has participated in the U.S. Census since 1950.

Lt. Gov. Eloy S. Inos said yesterday that the Fitial administration is now preparing for another partial government shutdown that will again result in joblessness for over 1,000 workers for days, because the House of Representatives has yet to pass a budget bill with only a little over a month before the start of fiscal year 2012 on Oct. 1.

At the same time, some citizens are calling on the public to hold a protest in front of the Legislature today from 1pm to 4pm to oppose the House Ways and Means Committee's latest draft of the 2012 budget bill, which they say cuts education budget, among other things.

Inos, who oversees government finances, said the Fitial administration sent over its proposed fiscal year 2012 budget of $102 million to the Legislature on April 1. Four months later, the House has yet to pass a budget bill that the Senate also has to review.

Possible oil discharges at Rota's power plant

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency investigated the Rota power plant this month for contamination of oil and cancer-causing chemical polychlorinated biphenyls or PCBs.

In a report filed yesterday in the U.S. District Court for the NMI, EPA legal counsel Bradley R. O'Brien disclosed that the assessment of the Rota Power Plant for oil and PCBs was done from Aug. 1 to 10, 2011.

Delegate Gregorio Kilili Sablan's formal announcement of his second re-election bid Wednesday night drew a mixed crowd of independents, Republicans, Democrats, and Covenants who said their support is rooted in the delegate's hard work and effectiveness in advancing education, health care, federalization, and other CNMI-related issues in the nation's capital despite constant hammering from the Fitial administration.

Kilili's campaign kickoff draws support from mixed crowd

"I work for all of you," Sablan (Ind-MP) told the crowd from the CNMI and Guam that gathered at the Pacific Island Club's Charley's Cabaret. "I am grateful for your presence here."

At the fundraiser, Sablan assured his supporters that not a penny of their contribution will be used to buy beer at any campaign gathering or public meeting.

He said he's humbled that despite the tough times, people still came to the $200-per-plate fundraiser to show their support.

Sablan, the CNMI's first non-voting delegate to the U.S. House of Representatives, was first elected delegate in 2008 for a two-year term and was sworn into office in 2009.

He won by a large margin in his first re-election bid in 2010, and is the first one to announce his candidacy for the November 2012 elections.

Sablan, standing beside Saipan Southern High School's award-winning Manta Ray Band, also introduced his campaign manager, Northern Marianas College's Galvin Deleon Guerrero, a Republican.

Deleon Guerrero was former governor Juan N. Babauta's running mate when the latter ran for governor in 2009. Babauta also ran for delegate in 2010 but lost the four-way race to Sablan.

In his remarks, Deleon Guerrero said the CNMI needs someone who "really cares about everybody in the Commonwealth," despite criticism from leaders and community members about his stand on issues.

"And I know that's not always politically popular. I know he has taken some heat by taking a stand on some issues but that's what we so desperately need in our political discourse. We need people who care, we need people who focus on issues, and we need people who work very, very hard," he said.

In an interview later, Deleon Guerrero said one of the best traits of an effective non-voting delegate is the ability to reach across the aisle in Congress to advance the CNMI's interest and he said Sablan has proven this time and again.

Deleon Guerrero, in his remarks before the crowd, said, "Congressman Kilili has accomplished a lot. No doubt about that. And he's accomplished a lot by standing on the shoulders of giants."

He gave credit to those who laid the foundation: former CNMI resident representatives to Washington, D.C. Juan N. Babauta and Pete A. Tenorio.

Deleon Guerrero said the campaign is not about Sablan nor any political party, but "about that poor person who's starving. He doesn't have a job and all he can rely on is perhaps food stamps. Now I don't believe in welfare but I do believe in helping people who need it the most."

He has also prepared himself for the campaign.

"Politics in the CNMI is a blood sport, I know. I've been through it...I've been bruised. My reputation has been tainted. It's hard. It pulls people apart. It tears families apart, and it empties your pocket book. That's why we need your help here tonight, right?" he said; the last statement, in jest.

Tom Tebuteb, a Republican for 24 years, asked: "Is it so wrong to support a guy that's doing right, with all the turmoil and the shenanigans in the national and local levels? It's time to unite."

Tebuteb is the special assistant for administration during the Babauta administration and also a Cabinet member during the time of former governors Froilan Tenorio and Pedro P. Tenorio.

The crowd included those from the CNMI and Guam business community, former and current government officials including Senate President Paul Manglona (Ind-Rota) and former Marianas Visitors Authority managing director Vicky Benavente, along with other guests from Guam; among them, attorneys David Lujan and Joaquin Arriola.

Juan S. Tenorio, who was very much involved in former House speaker Heinz Hofschneider's gubernatorial campaign in 2009 under the Republican Party, said that Sablan is the right man for the job of delegate.

Former independent gubernatorial candidate Juan "Pan" T. Guerrero said "hands down to Kilili," while Republican David M. Sablan said Kilili is "doing a good job in Washington, D.C. and the CNMI—how can you turn this guy down when he needs your help?"

Jean Sablan, chair of Sablan's fundraising committee, said they exceeded their target of selling at least 100 tickets at the fundraiser.

"We are thankful for those who came and supported him," she said.

The Republican, Covenant, and Democratic parties have yet to announce their candidate for the 2012 delegate race. (Haidee V. Eugenio)

20 more classroom teachers needed in public schools

»Registered enrollees at 10,737

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The Public School System still needs 20 more teachers for this new school year in order to accommodate all its enrollees, which already number 10,737 as of this week, according to Education Commissioner Rita A. Sablan yesterday.

At Marianas High School, seven teachers are needed—three for math, two for career technical education, and one each for science and language arts.

Three classroom teachers are required at William S. Reyes Elementary School, while Garapan Elementary is scouting for two teachers. Kagman Elementary is trying to recruit one teacher while Hopwood Junior High is looking for two science teachers.

Two special education teachers are also needed at Tinian schools and one teacher each for Gregorio T. Camacho Elementary School and Hopwood Junior High. A new post opened up at Saipan Southern High School for its special education program.

Classes in public schools will begin on Sept. 6.

Sablan reported that 10,737 students have so far enrolled with PSS as of Aug. 24, broken down into 5,288 students for elementary; 4,987 for secondary; 462 for Head Start; and 56 for early intervention.

Sablan earlier projected between 3 and 5 percent increase in enrollment this school year. Registration is still ongoing in many schools.

Except for a few staffing needs in some schools, Sablan said that PSS is pretty much ready to open classes in September School schedules and course offerings are all completed for the new school year; inspections are ongoing in all school campuses. Sablan also assured the Board of Education that the Food and Nutrition Services vendor and program are in place, ready to provide breakfast and lunch meals to both public and private schools.

To ensure children's safety,

PSS revised the bus transportation schedule this year and encourage parents to chaperone their kids to the bus stations. All buses will roll out of central bus station at 6:45am with first pick up at 7am.

Elementary schools will start classes at 8am, while secondary schools will start at 8:30am.

Highly qualified

Sablan said yesterday that PSS has achieved 100 percent employment of highly qualified personnel, including administrators, counselors, and classroom teachers.

This is pursuant to the No Child Left Behind Act mandate that all school districts will fill classrooms only with highly qualified personnel beginning July 31, 2011.

According to PSS finance director Richard Waldo, there are an estimated 570 classroom teachers currently employed by PSS, including federally funded employees.

"We retain those who passed their Praxis and other requirements and we let go of those who failed," he told Saipan Tribune, adding that due to number of newly passed HQTs, salaries were adjusted based on the HQT compensation plan.

Early this year, over 100 employees, majority of them teachers, were issued 90-day notice as a result of non-compliance with HQT requirements. Waldo revealed that a significant number passed the standards and kept their jobs while others are still waiting for the result of their Praxis tests.

Saipan lawmakers heed admin request to hold off casino vote

By HAIDEE V. EUGENIO
haidee_eugenio@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The Fitial administration asked Saipan lawmakers yesterday to hold off for at least until today a vote on a Saipan casino gambling legalization bill, mainly to recommend tweaking the measure some more to give more flexibility to a casino commission in deciding on the number of licenses to be issued and amount of required investments.

Saipan and Northern Islands Legislative Delegation acting chair Rep. Joseph Palacios (R-Saipan) allowed the session to go on yesterday afternoon, but only to hear public comments on the casino bill.

Palacios then called for a delegation session recess until 10am today, forcing House Speaker Eli Cabrera (R-Saipan) to reset today's 9:30am House session to 2pm.

Lt. Gov. Eloy S. Inos met with House leadership members early yesterday afternoon in the speaker's conference room to discuss the Fitial administration's concerns about the bill.

Inos, in an interview, said the administration is suggesting that the bill give a proposed casino commission the "authority and the flexibility" to make the decision of determining the number of casino licenses to be issued and the amount of investments allowed "rather than prescribe that by law."

The delegation's Committee on Judiciary and Governmental Operations recommended passage of its version of House Local Bill 17-44 which allows up to four casino licenses to be issued — one reserved for a Northern Marianas descent corporation and the rest to all other investors.

Inos sat in the House gallery during the delegation session.

After the session, members of the House leadership met with Gov. Benigno R. Fitial and Inos to again talk about the casino bill.

Palacios, who also chairs the delegation's JGO Committee, said he does not anticipate a substitute casino bill, but there will be amendments proposed mainly to accommodate suggestions from the Fitial administration.

Rep. Stanley Torres (Ind-Saipan), author of the casino bill, said the casino bill will be voted on today. He reiterated that the bill has enough votes to pass the delegation.

Once the bill passes, it goes directly to the governor for sino bill, was prepared yesterday with his floor amendments.

His proposed amendments include granting exclusive casino license fee of $100 million, and imposing a $10 million application fee for each non-exclusive license.

But some members said these amendments may still be changed.

During yesterday's delegation session, five members of the general public testified in support of Torres' casino bill, citing the need to spur economic activity at a time when government employees receive a 16-hour cut biweekly and many others now jobless.

Among those who testified were former representative Juan S. Reyes, Saipan Municipal Council chair Ramon B. Camacho who spoke as a private citizen, former speaker Pedro R. Leon Guerrero, Liana Hofschneider, and Richard Hofschneider.

Reyes said he does not see any proposal other than legalizing casinos to save the economy, and to save the Retirement Fund, among other things.

"The Retirement Fund will be gone in three years, said a consultant... If you don't act now, it will be too late... We elected you to make the tough decision," he said.

Leon Guerrero, for his part, challenged everyone opposed to the casino bill to offer an alternative solution to the economic problems.

BUCKINGHAM

Bellas said the committee is required to investigate all requests for complaints, unless it's determined that the request should not be entertained at all.

Once a complaint or request for investigation is received, the Disciplinary Committee begins the process of investigation.

Bellas said the process is confidential. The Senate has repeatedly announced through the adoption of a formal resolution and through the media that it will be formally requesting the Bar Association's Ethics Committee to investigate Buckingham in connection with his approval of a sole-source, ARRA management contract worth close to $400,000.

As part of the committee rules, it will notify all the parties concerned of the investigation, along with the chief justice and the presiding judge.

Bellas said he will recuse himself from the investigation process because of possible conflict of interest.

The committee will be meeting on Saturday. Bellas said if majority of the five-member Disciplinary Committee declares conflict of interest, they will notify and request the presiding judge to appoint an ad-hoc committee to conduct an investigation.

Sen. Frank Cruz (R-Tinian), chairman of the Senate Committee on Executive Appointments and Governmental Investigation, wrote an Aug. 22 letter to Bellas requesting an investigation on Buckingham.

Cruz's letter followed the Senate's transmittal of a copy of Senate Resolution 17-62, requesting the Bar Association's Disciplinary Committee to investigate Buckingham "for ethical violations regarding his approval of the CNMI ARRA management sole-source contract."

"The Senate is very concerned about this matter and files this complaint against Mr. Edward Buckingham for violating his oath of office, the ABA Model of Professional Conduct, and CNMI laws and regulations regarding his involvement in the approval of the CNMI ARRA management sole-source contract," Cruz told Bellas.

Buckingham had denied accusations that he violated ethical rules or laws. He said he reviewed and decided on the proposed contract, taking into consideration the risk of losing tens of millions of dollars in ARRA money if the ARRA program is not properly managed.

The attorney general said he did not financially benefit from signing off on the contract. He added that the Office of the Public Auditor itself did not raise ethical concerns when the governor asked for guidance prior to the routing of the sole-source contract that was later on awarded to former Commerce secretary Michael Ada's private firm.

Delegate Gregorio Kilili Sablan (Ind-MP) said a decrease in population could mean a decline in federal formula grant, which is based on population.

"A 22-percent drop is a big drop," he told Saipan Tribune.

The CNMI receives a little over $160 million in federal grants annually, a "good portion of which," said Sablan, is formula grant.

Rep. Joseph Palacios (R-Saipan), in an interview, said the 2010 Census data justifies his initiative to reduce the number of lawmakers—at least the Saipan lawmakers in the House of Representatives. His proposal is to reduce the Saipan members of the House from 18 to nine.

As of yesterday, he said he may amend his proposal to reduce the number to only 12 or 14.

U.S. Census Bureau director Robert Groves provided the CNMI population counts to Gov. Benigno R. Fitial, the administration said yesterday.

"I am very much pleased to receive the CNMI's Census population figures from the U.S. Census Bureau director. As I understand it, the more detailed results including the islands' demographic profile won't be ready for release until next year," Fitial said in a statement.

Next year's report will include the basic demographic, social, economic and housing characteristics for the CNMI.

Census data are used to distribute more than $400 billion in federal funds to local, state, and tribal governments each year, and to help government and community leaders make decisions about what services to provide.

Douglas Brennan, president of the Saipan Chamber of Commerce, said yesterday they have yet to review the newly released Census data.

Saipan, Tinian, Rota

Saipan's population dipped by 22.7 percent or by 14,172—from 62,392 in 2000 to 48,220 in 2010.

Tinian's population also went down by 11.4 percent or 404—from 3,540 in 2000 to 3,136 last year.

Rota saw the biggest drop in terms of percentage. Its population went from 3,283 in 2000 to 2,527 in 2010, representing a 23-percent decline or an equivalent of 756 individuals.

Of Saipan's five election districts or precincts, Precinct 3 is the most populated with 15,624. This precinct covers San Antonio, Koblerville, As Lito, Chalan Piao, Dandan, parts of San Vicente, among other villages.

Precinct 1 is not far behind, with a population of 15,160. Its villages include Garapan, San Jose, Puerto Rico and portions of Capital Hill.

Precinct 5 came in third with a population of 7,207, covering Kagman and portions of San Vicente, among other villages.

Precinct 2 ranked fourth with 6,382 individuals in Chalan Kanoa and Susupe.

Precinct 4 has the smallest population with only 3,847, covering Tana-pag, San Roque, As Teo and Marpi, among other areas.

Guam, Virgin Islands

The 2010 Census sought to establish an updated count of everyone living in the United States and its territories, including the CNMI, Guam, Puerto Rico, American Samoa, and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

While the CNMI reported a 22.2-percent drop in population, its neighbor Guam posted a population increase.

Guam's population grew by 2.9 percent in a 10-year period, or from 154,805 in 2000 to 159,358 in 2010.

The U.S. Virgin Islands saw a 2-percent decrease in population, or from 108,612 in 2010 to 106,405 in 2010.

The United States population rose by 9.7 percent—from 281,421,906 in the 2000 Census to 308,745,538 as of April 1, 2010.

POWER PLANT

awaiting analysis, O'Brien said, but a sheen was found along the shoreline adjacent to the facility.

O'Brien said oil—likely diesel—was present in almost all of the soil borings and groundwater wells installed at the facility.

He said EPA is now discussing with CUC options for addressing potential ongoing oil discharges and preventing continued movement of contaminants into U.S. waters.

"EPA has notified CUC that it should be preparing to conduct this work and needs to identify a funding source, since these next steps have not been funded," he said.

O'Brien warned that if CUC cannot perform immediate cleanup activities to address the oil contamination, EPA may need to take action to protect the waters of Rota.

He said CUC may be held liable for cost and penalties.

In the same investigation of the Rota power plant, O'Brien said that EPA found transformers that were being stored with no secondary containment and that certain secondary containment areas had holes drilled in the bottoms (with no pipe or valve) so that liquid flowed out of them, rendering the containment ineffective.

He said the valves on other secondary containment areas were left open (some locked open) so that collected liquids drained from the areas and making the containment ineffective.

The federal court will hold a status conference on Monday, Aug. 29, to discuss the extent to which CUC has made progress in complying with the requirements of the stipulated orders.

O'Brien listed the Rota power plant contamination investigation as among the six major topics at the conference.

SHUTDOWN

"At this point, it [budget] is still the property of the Legislature. We sent the budget over since April 1. And we're ready to look at the budget that's enacted by the Legislature. We're not at that point yet," said Inos in an interview after a closed-door meeting with members of the House leadership on a separate issue—the Saipan casino bill.

Inos, a former Finance secretary, said the government is not expected to run out of money between now and the end of fiscal year 2011 on Sept. 30.

"We're still tracking [in our projections], except for some shortfall in hospital collection but we're working hard on that. For this fiscal year, we're set to go until Sept. 30. It's Oct. 1, the new fiscal year, when if no budget is enacted... then the shutdown provision of the Constitution kicks in," he said.

He again pointed out the need to pass a budget soon.

"It's really a timing issue. But I tell you one thing for sure. We're gearing up for a shutdown. Because we haven't seen a [budget] bill. The budget hasn't passed the House. So we're doing preparations for possible shutdown," Inos said.

The Constitution requires a government shutdown in the event that a new budget is not passed before the beginning of the fiscal year. The shutdown will remain until a budget is passed by the Legislature and signed by the governor.

Inos said once there's another partial shutdown, there will be more government employees who will be affected because the administration will impose a stricter policy in determining the so-called critical government employee positions who will be exempted from the shutdown.

An intense budget deadlock between the House and Senate last year resulted in a historic partial government shutdown in October 2010.

The agenda for today's House session does not include any 2012 budget bill.

House floor leader George Camacho (Ind-Saipan) said last night that House Ways and Means Committee chair Rep. Ray Basa (Cov-Saipan) may introduce a budget bill today.

The House, however, cannot immediately act on the budget bill because it's not pre-filed and not offered for review for at least 24 hours by House members and the public.

The latest draft of the budget bill still includes a 16-hour work cut every two weeks, at least for the first quarter of 2012, along with unpaid holidays.

Senate President Paul Manglona (Ind-Rota) reiterated that the Senate leadership hopes to receive a budget bill from the House as soon as possible, with only about a month to go before the start of fiscal year 2012.

Even if the House passes a budget bill next week, the Senate will only have a month to review it. If the Senate rejects the House budget bill, they still have to call a conference committee that will deliberate on a budget acceptable to both houses.

Manglona said the Senate does not want to see another partial government shutdown, adding that both houses need to work together.

Ex-DPW official asks to be sentenced to home confinement

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE
ferdie_deltorre@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

A former Department of Public Works building code inspector who pleaded guilty to extorting money from a local business owner has asked the federal court to give him a 10-month home confinement sentence.

Thomas S. Salas, through counsel David G. Banes, said the court should sentence him to 10 months of home confinement, given that he is an excellent candidate for rehabilitation.

Citing that Salas led a crime-free life for almost nine years since his prior conviction on a misdemeanor, Banes said the court should consider this an important factor in deciding Salas' sentence.

If the court wishes to follow the sentencing guidelines, which are not mandatory, Banes said that Salas asks the court to impose a sentence of a five-month prison term and five-month home confinement.

Banes said that Salas has admitted to this crime and accepted responsibility for his actions. He said the court should consider that Salas is a devoted father of his children and fully cooperated with the U.S. government as to how the crime was committed and also to his knowledge about many other crimes.

He noted that Salas not only cooperated but never violated any conditions of his release during almost one year of pre-trial supervision.

"The court should also consider Tom's lack of drug or alcohol abuse, that he wants to pursue his education and is in a stable relationship," Banes said.

In the U.S. government's sentencing memorandum filed yesterday in court, assistant U.S. attorney Eric O'Malley recommended that Salas be made to serve at least half of whatever sentence is imposed by incarceration as opposed to home confinement.

"Nonetheless, per the plea agreement, the government recommends a sentence of incarceration and fine at the lowest end of whatever [sentencing guidelines] range is determined by the court," O'Malley said.

The government, O'Malley said, will provide additional recommendations regarding community service and supervised release at the sentencing hearing.

Chief Judge Ramona V. Manglona will hold Salas' sentencing on Tuesday, Aug. 30 at 10am.

O'Malley acknowledged that Salas accepted responsibility early, and has complied with the terms of his release. He noted that the defendant provided information regarding other prospective matters.

Although there are several factors that weigh in favor of leniency, from the government's view, the most important sentencing factor to be considered in this case is "to afford adequate deterrence to criminal conduct," O'Malley said.

"Graft at any level of government inevitably degrades trust in the system itself. If members of the public do not trust the system, they will be less likely to abide its structures, thus perpetuating a destructive cycle," he added.

O'Malley said the community in which Salas committed his crime now suffers from such a cycle. "Only strict accountability can interrupt this cycle."

The FBI arrested Salas on Sept. 7, 2010, after he extorted a total of $200 cash from a businessman.

According to the indictment, Salas used his position with the DPW to demand bribes from the owner of a printing press in exchange for not imposing building code violation fines.

In May 2011, Salas pleaded guilty to the crime of extortion under color of official right, which carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Education board approves merger of two Rota schools

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

After several hours of listening to differing views and despite the lack of a long-term comprehensive plan, the CNMI Board of Education approved yesterday the merger of the Dr. Rita Hocog Inos Junior High School and Rota High School.

The board adopted the decision to merge both schools by a vote of 3-2, with board vice chair Denise Tanya King and board member Galvin Deleon Guerrero voting against it.

The merger—seen to generate savings for the Public School System by maximizing limited resources such as teachers and technologies—will take effect starting this school year.

The Rota High School campus will be shut down, except for the gymnasium, baseball field, and the Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps. All 7th to 12th graders will be moved to the junior high school campus, which will retain the name Dr. Rita Hocog Inos Junior and High School.

The merger also approved the transfer of sixth graders from junior high to the Sinapalo Elementary School.

According to Education Commissioner Rita A. Sablan, the merger will bring substantial savings to PSS because it will eliminate 13 classroom teacher positions and one principal position.

She said the enrollment decline on the island was also a factor. Many classes in Rota schools have a small number of students, resulting in a student-to-teacher ratio of just 15:1. By merging the two schools, PSS can increase the ratio to the maximum 23:1 for the secondary level.

The merger will not result in layoffs, but will balance the budget, according to PSS, which expects to receive only $28 million this new fiscal year, based on Gov. Benigno R. Fitial's budget submission.

The decision came even as King and Rota Legislative Delegation chair Sen. Juan Ayuyu (Ind-Rota) asked the board to defer its decision and wait until after PSS conducts a long-term comprehensive plan for the merger.

King said it was only three weeks ago when she was told about the plan, with the assurance that it will not take effect until after three years. She said such a major plan requires long-term planning, a feasibility study, thorough consultation with all stakeholders, and that the decision must be data-driven.

"There are too many unanswered questions," said King. "A merger is not best at this time."

For example, King said, the Rota delegation and a significant number of community members on Rota were never involved in the discussion. King also criticized the lack of clear cost and impact analysis of the plan.

Deleon Guerrero said there are important projected numbers that are missing in the presentation, including the specific amount that PSS will save in implementing the plan.

Federal programs officer Tim

Thornburgh estimated that savings from the merger will reach about $540,000, including savings on utility consumption as a result of shutting down school buildings. From 35 classroom teachers, the merger will bring down the teacher count to 22.

Saipan Tribune learned that the Dr. Rita Hocog Inos Junior and High School will absorb Sharlene Manglona as its principal, while Annette Calvo will act as the school's vice principal. The two are the current principals of the two schools.

Along with Sinapalo Elementary School principal Vanessa Hocog, Manglona, and Calvo are convinced that the merger will not negatively impact the students. In fact, they said it will help eighth graders transition to high school, which is always a problem in many secondary schools.

According to student representative Mary Hocog, the merger will help rather than harm junior high school students because it will enable them to adapt easily to high school life.

PTSAs supportive

A handful of individuals also expressed support for the merger during yesterday's public comment section of the meeting. Among them were the officers of the parents and teachers associations in both Dr. Rita Hocog Inos Junior High and Rota High School. They included Dexter Apatang, Therese Hizon, Marla Barcinas, and Sharon Manglona.

According to Commissioner Sablan, PSS hosted two meetings to inform the Rota community about the plan. These were held on Aug. 11 and 12 where representatives of various offices on Rota were represented.

PSS said the plan was also supported by Rota Mayor Melchor Mendiola and the Municipal Council as well as parents' groups on the islands.

Tinian Junior and Senior High School principal Julian Hofschneider also expressed support, sharing his school's success in combining students from 7th to 12th grades.

At present, Rota High School has 182 ninth to 12th graders, while the junior high school has 96 seventh to eighth graders, after transferring the sixth graders to Sinapalo Elementary School.

'Higher Fund contribution means deeper cuts for govt'

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The higher contribution of $10 million every year to the NMI Retirement Fund pension program would mean deeper cuts for the cash-strapped government, according to press secretary Angel A. Demapan.

The government owes the Fund over $280 million in unpaid employer contributions for many years. The amount is on top of delinquent contribution incurred in the last several months, according to Fund records.

Wilshire Associates, the Fund's investment consultant, revealed this week that the Fund is expected to collapse in three years due to the nonpayment of these obligations to the Fund and the lack of strong support by the government as the pension plan's sponsor.

The only way to prolong its lifespan, according to the consultant, is to increase the cash flow of the agency to prevent regular drawdowns that deplete its value. Additionally, across-the-board cuts in members' benefits and restructuring of other liabilities are key to its survival.

During Wednesday's hearing at the Legislature, Fund administrator Richard Villagomez said some lawmakers tossed around the idea of increasing government contribution next fiscal year from $10 million to $25 million in order to save the pension plan.

But Demapan said this idea may result in more suffering in the government's operations.

"Should the Legislature push forward with their proposal to increase the line item appropriation to $25 million, such action would drastically change the dynamics of the fiscal year 2012 budget and would ultimately force deeper cuts on all other accounts to suffice what would be a $15 million increase in line-item appropriation to the Fund," he told Saipan Tribune.

He said that, with the $10 million line-item appropriation in the governor's submission of the 2012 budget, "the Fund would stand to receive payments greater than if it were to be calculated by way of percentage of payroll, given the decrease in payroll dollars in the midst of the ongoing austerity."

Demapan said this is why the administration encouraged the Legislature to pass H.B. 17-99, which seeks to change the payment method for employer contribution. This bill has been in the Senate since February.

"The proposed action is consistent with negotiations in the ongoing lawsuit by the NMIRF to collect employer contribution funds owed them. We strongly urge the Legislature to quickly act on H.B. 17-99 to support this change in employer contribution payment method," added Demapan.

DPH needs $3M for medical referral

With a month to go before the current fiscal year ends, the Department of Public Health will need additional $3 million to provide assistance to residents under its medical referral program. DPH Sec. Joseph Kevin Villagomez attributed the shortfall to drastic 50 percent cut in the amount appropriated by the government in FY 1999 as well as to the costly medical expenses incurred by patients who have been referred to off-island hospitals. "Actually we will be in a hole more but the Legislature gave me the flexibility to use some of those accounts," he told reporters. "So it's been good, but right now we just have a lot of very sick people and we can't (help them) no matter what system you put in place."

Four agencies identified as Y2K critical

A Y2K project team composed of local and federal computer experts has identified four government offices as the most critical agencies which must receive the federal government's million grant for computer system upgrading program. Identified as Y2K critical agencies are the Commonwealth Health Center, the Commonwealth Utilities Corp., the Department of Finance, and the Public School System. The CNMI is receiving a total of $1.38 million from the Y2K grant, which will come from the Office of Management and Budget. The Department of Interior said that upon instruction from OMB, it will have to monitor and scrutinize the disbursement of Y2K funds, which are given only to U.S. insular territories.

OIA asked for tech support

Gov. Juan N. Babauta has asked the Office of Insular Affairs for technical assistance to enable not just the CNMI but all insular territories to more effectively tap available federal grants. In a letter to OIA Deputy Assistant Secretary David B. Cohen, Babauta asked the OIA to provide the insular governments with the technical assistance that will lead to more effective ways in which the insular areas can readily have knowledge of the vast amounts of grants available in the federal government. This includes the process of accessing these grants and the most effective way of tapping into these monies. This comes even as Babauta expressed support to the OIA's continued assistance to the CNMI and other U.S. insular territories in support of FED-FACTS and the Federal Grants Review publications.

JAL's Enomoto bids sayonara

After a four-year assignment on Saipan, Japan Airlines' District Manager Yukiharu Enomoto will be leaving the CNMI tomorrow and going back to Japan to rejoin his family. Shinichi Yoshida will take over Enomoto's duties. He has already arrived from Japan and will officially takeover tomorrow. To recognize the valuable contributions that Enomoto made to the CNMI, the Commonwealth Ports Authority and the Airport Operators Committee hosted a farewell luncheon for Enomoto last Thursday, August 22, at the Pacific Islands Club. Enomoto will leave Saipan for Japan tomorrow, where he is being reassigned to the JAL operations at Haneda Airport.

Counsel: Atalig to appeal conviction today

Sen. Ricardo Atalig intends to appeal his federal conviction on wire fraud charges before the U.S. Court of Appeals Ninth Circuit today, his lawyer disclosed yesterday. But Stephen Woodruff, Atalig's counsel, said the senator would surrender to the U.S. Marshal's Office by Thursday pursuant to an order by U.S. District Court Chief Judge Alex R. Munson, unless the court order is modified. Woodruff also divulged that he would file appropriate legal pleadings to have the August 28 surrender deadline changed, but he refused to describe what specific request he would ask the court for.

Commerce dept official robbed

A CNMI Department of Commerce employee filed a formal complaint against four juveniles who allegedly snatched his handbag while he was closing the office on Capitol Hill Friday night. The victim, whose identity was withheld by the Department of Public Safety, told investigators that he was closing his office at the Commerce Department building on Capitol Hill around 10pm Friday after working late to finish some paper works when four unidentified young males grabbed his bag from behind.

Fiesta Resort is top choice of Japan tour group's clients

By CLARISSA V. DAVID

REPORTER

Fiesta Resort & Spa Saipan was recently presented with a special award by a widely popular Japanese travel company for being the top hotel of choice among its customers.

Rakuten Travel Inc., which operates Japan's largest online hotel reservation website, bestowed the 2010 Diamond Award for Saipan on Fiesta Resort & Spa Saipan in June.

Junichi Kitagawa, Fiesta Resort & Spa Saipan Sales & Marketing director, said the award covers the period from April 2010 to March 2011. Saipan World Resort came in second place.

The Diamond Award, Kitagawa said, indicates that Fiesta Resort & Spa is the No. 1 hotel for Rakuten Travel Inc.'s customers.

"It's our first time to receive the Diamond Award," he told Saipan Tribune. "We're very happy and very proud about it."

According to Kitagawa, Fiesta Resort & Spa was able to accommodate some 1,500 visitors and guests who booked through Rakuten Travel Inc.

Junichi Kitagawa, Fiesta Resort & Spa Saipan Sales & Marketing director, shows off the 2010 Diamond Award for Saipan that was awarded the resort hotel by Rakuten Travel Inc.

1.8 million room nights booked per month. It is a subsidiary of Rakuten, Inc., one of the world's largest and most comprehensive Internet service companies, providing leading services in e-commerce, portal & media, travel, financial services, and professional sports.

Kitagawa said that most Japanese vacationers prefer to decide on their hotels and check in through the Internet because it's a lot more convenient.

He said these travelers who stayed at Fiesta Resort & Spa possibly posted their experience at Fiesta on the Rakuten website as well as brochures and guide books about Saipan.

Kitagawa said positive comments about Fiesta Resort & Spa have prompted more travelers visiting the island to stay in the hotel, making it popular among Rakuten customers.

"I believe Fiesta Resort & Spa is a very good choice for tourists because of its location. We're located in downtown Garapan, which is in the center of activity on Saipan," he said.

Kitagawa added that rooms in the higher floors of the hotel are also the most popular among guests as these provide a nice view overlooking one of Saipan's wonderful beaches.

The director also takes pride in the "Hafa Adai spirit" of Fiesta Resort's hotel staff. "We always strive to provide our customers with the Fiesta hospitality," he said.

Kitagawa said Fiesta Resort & Spa currently has a 78-percent room occupancy rate, composed mainly of Japanese and Korean tourists.

"These tourist markets are growing, that's why we have Japanese and Korean speaking staff so we can cater to their needs," he said, adding that they also have employees that speak Chinese.

Kitagawa vowed that Fiesta Resort & Spa will continue to provide its customers with quality accommodation to make their stay on island a memorable one.

"At Fiesta Resort & Spa, our customers are treated like royalty."

Spring shows no sign of withering

© 2011, Sacramento Bee

The Arab Spring in the Middle East and North Africa continues to flower despite setbacks and dictators willing to massacre their own people.

In the latest sign this season will not pass quickly or meekly, Libyan rebels have taken control of parts of the capital city of Tripoli, and seem prepared to end 42 years of despotic rule by Col. Moammar Gadhafi.

The leader of the Libyan opposition National Transition Council, formed in February as the “face of the revolution,” declared Monday that “the Gadhafi era is over.” Most heartening is that young people are demanding a voice in Libya and elsewhere. As Internet connections came back up Monday after a six-month blackout, the Libya Youth Movement was posting Twitter updates.

This is a case in which the United States, working through the international community and the NATO military alliance, was able to make a difference, taking measures short of ground troops and invasion to prevent massacres, providing the time and space for the Libyan people to take matters into their own hands.

President Barack Obama’s patience, with an arms embargo, freezing of Libyan government assets, economic sanctions and NATO surveillance, air and drone strikes to destroy Gadhafi’s military capacity, has paid off.

Libyans, the United States and the larger international community have been attentive to the lessons of Iraq, particularly avoiding a power vacuum in the aftermath of the collapse of a dictatorial regime.

The Libyan Transitional National Council has done extensive post-conflict planning since February, from how to maintain law and order to resuming oil production to what to do about former Gadhafi officials. The council hopes to move to parliamentary elections in the next six to eight months. It has secured loans from Turkey, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Kuwait to pay for essentials, food, medicine, fuel.

An International Contact Group on Libya – with officials from the United States, Great Britain, Italy, Turkey and other nations – has met four times since April, working with opposition leaders to draw detailed plans in preparation for Gadhafi’s fall. The United States can use the release of the Gadhafi regime’s frozen assets to leverage positive action.

This has been a risky involvement for the United States. And uncertainty lies ahead in crafting new institutions to match the aspirations of the Libyan people. But as Obama said Monday, “Although the efforts in Libya are not yet over, NATO has once more proven that it is the most capable alliance in the world and that its strength comes from both its firepower and the power of our democratic ideals.”

While Western nations can’t and shouldn’t dictate the leadership of Arab countries, they can lend support to citizens in that region trying to topple despots. That’s the new doctrine of the U.S. and European response to the Arab Spring, a refreshing change from policies of the past. That’s something to celebrate, along with the aspirations of Libyans who yearn for a more open and egalitarian government.

The hot-seat

As a kid, I marveled at white people who’d go to the beach, strip down to practically nothing and purposely sit directly under the burning sun to talk and “relax.” For most islanders, unless you were fishing, a relaxing day at the beach usually meant finding a spot in the cool shade of a tree or at least taking cover in a comfortable pair of dungarees and a long-sleeve shirt. One might say that white people (i.e., “State-siders”) like it hot, but islanders generally prefer to stay cool or at least not get burned—yet another oxymoron for half-breeds who on the one hand have an inherent knack for kicking back in the shade without making a sound and on the other, a neurotic fixation on the sun and a runaway mouth that can’t hold its tongue. Given a choice, I’d rather be fishing.

On heat of a different kind, the proverbial hot-seat comes in varying degrees of temperature depending on several factors, all of which culminate into a level of energy generated in and around it. Most of us would prefer to avoid it, but for all intents and purposes, energy is good—we need it, we’re forever trying to harness it and ultimately we can’t live without it. The key is to facilitate safe, productive levels of it in and around your general vicinity. Still, when bringing heat or fire for that matter, we need to be mindful of people getting burned. Think of the hot-seat like an old, brick fireplace in the dead of winter (not exactly an islander’s analogy, I know). Without it, people freeze to death, but if it’s poorly built people get burned. Ultimately it matters, the substance of the mortar, bricks and other materials holding the framework of the chimney together. It also matters the kind of fodder being used to feed the fire. The point though is that heat is good and oftentimes necessary, so people should tend the fire.

NMPASI’s advocates are no strangers to the hot-seat; in fact, the job requires that each of us sit in it from time to time. And, though people are far less contentious over the rights and needs of individuals with disabilities than they use to be, the job still requires that we turn up the heat from time to time—even on ourselves. That’s not to say that anything is wrong, but rather that it keeps us from doing things wrong. With forest fires nearby, we have to be ready to mitigate effects of the changing winds. So, we might bring the heat sometimes, but we can take it too.

For people with disabilities, it took some “advocates from hell” to light societal norms on fire in order for them and their issues to be brought to the forefront of America’s consciousness. Like all other civil rights movements, it took some collective thinking and an activist spirit to bring about the change that was so desperately needed (i.e., schools, businesses and the community at large finally opened their doors). No doubt there has been change for the better, but some things remain the same and “those who don’t know history are doomed to”—history, history, history, history, history, history, history, history, history—“repeat it.”

Our islands too have changed radically in recent years and we can no longer afford to simply kick back in the shade while things burn down around us. As a community, we’ve been rocked by corruption (at least the appearance of it) and a criminal element that preys on the helpless for far too long. Most recently, we’ve endured the possible killing of an old man, numerous abuses and/or rapes of children, so-called men beating on women, and, bless their souls, the kidnapping of two little girls. So the question is, what do we do about it?

Unfortunately, I don’t have the answer, but for sure we can’t rely on doing the same things over and over again hoping for a different outcome. Too many of us are content to sit idly by with our handy caps in tow—“in a state of quiet desperation,” if you will. But there are others: unassuming activists in the grass roots, the political fireballs in the mainstream and/or various heads of families who keep the wood piles high even in the summer months.

We can choose to lead, follow, or get out of the way, but maybe, just maybe, we will all “become the change that we seek in world” (Mahatma Gandhi) and keep the fires burning.

Book review: Basic Patterns of Chinese Grammar

If you'd like to blot out the concept of fun summertime reading, then join the Saipan Tribune readers who are studying Chinese these days. Light reading, it ain't: textbooks, books on writing the characters, books on reading the characters, books that ignore the characters and focus on speaking, books that don't ignore the characters and focus on speaking, books on vocabulary, and finally the most tormenting of all categories, books on grammar.

Grammar. Ugh. Well, I've finally found a ray of sunshine. It's a skinny little book titled Basic Patterns of Chinese Grammar, and it hit the scene this year.

It's just 127 pages including the index. But this is no superficial treatment of the grammar. The scope of the book goes beyond the three college semesters I've taken. So how can such a little book carry so much weight?

Well, I'll first consider what the conventional approach looks like, surveying it with my gimlet eye of cynicism, and then I'll note why Basic Patterns of Chinese Grammar is so useful.

When Gadhafi commanded respect

By WILLIAM J. COUGHLIN
LOS ANGELES TIMES

Watching from afar as Moammar Gadhafi's control crumbles in Libya, I was reminded of the events of March 1974. It's hard to remember today, but there was a time when the Libyan leader commanded great respect in the Middle East, and that spring he was at the height of his power.

The mercurial dictator, whose country was sitting on a lake of oil the size of Alaska, had been the first to declare an oil embargo against the United States after President Nixon asked Congress for $2.2 billion to resupply Israel's armed forces during the Yom Kippur War of 1973. The other Arab nations in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries eventually joined the Gadhafi embargo, and Henry Kissinger was working hard behind the scenes to try to end it.

At the time, I was a Los Angeles Times correspondent based in the Middle East, and I was dispatched to Cairo to cover the next OPEC meeting, which was expected to be a gauge of whether Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy was working.

Gadhafi refused to attend the meeting, insisting that any meeting to consider lifting the embargo should be held in Tripoli.

After two days of haggling behind closed doors, OPEC members announced that the meeting was moving to Tripoli the next day, a development that left hundreds of news correspondents, diplomats and oil industry observers scrambling to book flights and accommodations.

I managed to snag a first-class aisle seat on Lufthansa, and I was enormously pleased when the oil minister from one of the smaller Gulf states, clad in robes and headdress, took the window seat next to me. After we were airborne, I introduced myself: "I'm William Coughlin of the Los Angeles Times."

"Los Angeles?" he said. "I went to UCLA."

I put out my hand. "Stanford," I said, and then asked the obvious question: "Can you tell me why we all are so abruptly airborne on the way to Libya?"

"We've reached a decision, nine to one, and to please Gadhafi we are going to announce it in Tripoli."

"And what was the decision?"

"We're going to lift the embargo."

"Who was against it?"

"Gadhafi, of course."

Not wanting to push my luck, I launched into a discussion of Pacific Coast football, interrupting the conversation only once, to go ask the stewardess where the plane was going next. "Tunis," she replied, telling me there was space on the flight and I could remain on board. I was relieved, knowing I'd never be able to call in my OPEC scoop from Tripoli.

In Tunis, I sent my story without any problem, and it ran on the next day's front page. Meanwhile, I headed back to Tripoli to cover the official announcement. When I arrived, I learned that Gadhafi had decided he didn't want the news announced in his country. It was to be delayed until the weekend and announced in Vienna, where the Arab oil ministers were scheduled to meet with their non-Arab OPEC partners.

Wherever Gadhafi is now, I doubt he's being treated with that kind of deference.

William J. Coughlin, a Pulitzer Prize winner, was Middle East bureau chief of the Los Angeles Times for five years.

In any language I've seen, including English, most grammar books are as overbearing as possible. It's all rules and linguistic jargon. I guess they're striking for stature as "authoritative." Teaching you how to actually say something isn't the goal. After all, grammar is rules, not tactics. So the conventional product, belched out by institutions and publishers in industrial quantities, is tomes of authoritative discourse; big, gray, weighty. The material is perfectly correct, I suppose. But it's often totally useless.

Ever panned for gold in a muddy river? That's how grammar strikes me. I slosh through endless buckets of mud, hoping to find a speck of something shiny that actually has some real-world value.

During my last foray into Chinese grammar I actually kept track of my time. I was neck deep in the big muddy for 210 hours. Looking back on it I figure I retained maybe 10 hours worth of usable material. My peers have reported generally similar results. So our mud-to-nuggets ratio was mighty bad.

Well, that's the problem. Fortunately, Basic Patterns of Chinese Grammar looks like a solution. Authors Qin Xue Herzberg and Larry Herzberg, both professors of Chinese, don't get bogged down in the big muddy. Instead of forcing the reader to pan for gold, the writers did it for us. They sifted through all the mush, pulled out the best nuggets, polished them with well-chosen examples, and dropped them (plink!) into an easy-to-read format.

But easy-to-read doesn't mean fluffy. I noticed that the authors don't avoid the troublesome topics, but, instead, they focused on them. For students of Chinese, I'll note that the hydra-headed "le" particle is plainly sorted out here (Chapter 6). The triple-whammy "de" particle gets succinctly covered in Chapter 7. And the un-lovable realm of resultative verb endings gets neatly nailed down with several pages of examples (Chapter 10).

The last of the 13 chapters is a two-page summary of salutations

Let's get talking to save the nation

Dear reader,

This column will be contentious because it discusses the grave economic danger our country faces. It may challenge or contradict your present thinking.

If we were sitting down face to face, I would lean forward and say to you: Our country is in danger of going off the rails economically. We can all feel the downward slide accelerating. But we are divided, and to act together we've first got to learn to talk with each other again. And the first step toward talking together is to listen to each other carefully.

I ask you to listen. And I will in turn listen. Write me at peter.goldmark@newsday.com, and I'll answer you. Tell me, simply—without reference to ideology, party or magic potions—what do we need to do? For now, let's concentrate on goals.

Here is my list: We need to get many of the 20-plus million looking for work back earning again.

We need to make sure wealthy individuals (those with an annual income of $1 million or more) and corporations pay more, not less, in taxes as a percent of their income than the rest of us. We need the revenue, and we need a fair tax system that is not twisted to benefit the rich.

We need a large capital infrastructure investment program, because retail consumer spending and housing bubbles will no longer drive the economy. Modernizing infrastructure will create jobs and make us more competitive, which makes the whole economy stronger. And we can load the infrastructure program up with jobs.

We need incentives for state and local governments not to lay people off. We want those dollars and jobs pumping through our economy; we don't want to choke them off—that creates blockages in the system, the economic equivalent of a stroke.

We need to reform our entitlement programs—Social Security and health care in its many forms—so they still serve those in need but don't grow faster than the economy. I said "reform," not destroy.

In sum: We should invest capital in our future and create jobs, insist the rich carry their fair share, size our benefit programs to our means, and as we put people to work, embark on a five-year program to erase our operating budget deficit.

This will require increased taxes on all of us. I'm a crusty old budget director and I know how to balance budgets.

Incredibly, what the nation did last decade was reduce taxes and increase spending—and then pretend we'd discovered a magic potion that would make everything come out OK. Now it's time to pay the piper and get back on track. Avoiding a serious depression requires the steps above plus higher taxes. There is one, and only one, piece of good news in this brutal fact: The amount we have to raise in taxes now to avoid a depression is much less than we will have to raise later if we keep on digging the hole into which we jumped because of our own witlessness.

The hour is late. Which of my goals do you disagree with? I'm and such used for letter-writing. That's a nice touch. But it's just a touch, and the reverse side of the second page is vacant. If I was to make a suggestion for a future edition I'd suggest filling that blank slate with more tips for business letters.

Which leads me to some market context, since students, not business types, are the primary market for the book. It is clearly destined for success with students because it is, well, so successful at being clear.

But I think anyone studying the language, even informally, or on their own, or whatever, will also find this book useful. However, a lot of people will probably have to slog through a few hundred of hours of frustrating effort before they can truly appreciate the merits of succinct summarization.

And along those lines, what I want is a book on grammar that summarizes everything I need, and nothing I don't need. That's probably an impossible goal, but Basic Patterns of Chinese Grammar comes close enough for me. So I've put away my weighty texts, and maybe, just maybe, I'll be able to enjoy some of my summer now.

(Basic Patterns of Chinese Grammar, 127 pages, published by Stone Bridge Press, authored by Qin Xue Herzberg and Larry Herzberg, $12.95.)

not for abandoning the poor and the sick, or putting more people out of work rather than back into jobs. I won't support tax cuts for the rich while middle-class working folks carry the burden. I support Medicaid, Medicare and Social Security—but they cannot be allowed to grow so fast that they sink the whole ship.

There are ways to implement these objectives that are smart and effective. But first we have to stop yelling at each other and agree on those objectives.

Which of mine do you disagree with? With respect, your fellow citizen, Peter Goldmark.

Squeezing blood out of a turnip

So the Retirement Fund is destined for a sure collapse. In past years, the Fund saw its good times. Today, the question is not "what the Fund can do" but rather "what the Fund can not do." It is like expecting key elected and appointed government officials for a convincing discussion about economic development, when what really needs to be the focus is for these same elected and appointed government officials to have clear and convincing thoughts about development of economics. It is reality check, and the consequences do not actually spell out good times. If we could not get a clear and intelligent explanation from our key elected leaders and bureaucrats, the common person's assessment of hard times is a sure thing. Bureaucrats are hired and placed in office for their intellectual ability and know-how to solve problems. No one to blame but these same elected and appointed government officials. If solving problems means less economic production of goods and services for all, then that is the outcome, unless we are able to squeeze blood out of a turnip.

9 Japanese students enjoy island visit despite rain

By CLARISSA V. DAVID
clarissa_david@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Nine students from the Itoda City student exchange program are enjoying their stay on island amid sporadic rains the past few days.

Executive secretary Vinyia Seman of the Saipan Mayor's Office said yesterday that the students, ages 11 to 13, arrived with three chaperones on Sunday night from Fukuoka, Japan.

"Despite the rain, they're still having a good time doing sightseeing and meeting a lot of local students," she told Saipan Tribune.

Seman said Mayor Donald Flores welcomed the students on Monday morning and were presented with shell leis from the Marianas Visitors Authority.

The students visited historical sites and other interesting places such as Saipan Zoo and the Mount Carmel Cathedral. The students also met with their counterparts from the Grace Christian Academy.

While the students were not able to go to Managaha due to the bad weather, Seman said they went to see Paupau Beach where Mayor's Office staffer Ton Reyes demonstrated how to use a talaya, a circular fishing net.

Yesterday, Seman said, the students visited MVA where they were presented with tokens.

Itoda City Mayor's Office staffer Mitsutoshi Ozaki, one of the chaperones, will also present gifts to local students he assisted during the 20th Asia Pacific Children Convention in Fukuoka three years ago.

According to Seman, the Japanese students prepared for their trip by studying for three months several English and Chamorro phrases that they used during their visit.

Seman said the students are staying with their host families for the duration of the program. Host families include herself and Jeff Boyer, Ana Salas, Richard and Lorraine Seman, Fred and Tina Boyer, and Ieki and Valencia Tasi.

"We hope we continue to get more support from the community for this cultural exchange program," added Seman.

The students will have a send-off party on Saturday before they return home the next day.

Auto mechanic allegedly points knife at girlfriend

An auto mechanic was arrested Wednesday after he allegedly threatened his girlfriend with a knife, saying he would kill her if she leaves him.

William Degala, 39, was brought to the Superior Court yesterday for a Gerstein hearing, a proceeding when the arrest of a suspect is done without an arrest warrant.

Presiding Judge Robert

Naraja found probable cause to continue Degala's detention on charges of assault with a dangerous weapon, assault, and disturbing the peace. Degala's bail was set at $6,000 cash. Preliminary hearing will be on Aug. 31.

Detective Catherine B. Pangelinan, who narrated to the court the circumstances that led to Degala's arrest, said that two police officers had responded Wednesday morning to a store on Texas Road in Susupe after receiving a report about a disturbing the peace incident.

Pangelinan said the officers met the victim, who was inside a car. The victim told police that Degala pointed a knife at her and threatened to kill her after she told him that she doesn't love him anymore and that she has already found someone else.

Degala also allegedly forced her to have sex with him.

The following day, Wednesday, the victim decided to call the police.

When interviewed by police officers, Degala allegedly admitted threatening his girlfriend with a knife. (Ferdie de la Torre)

Special program to mark Rose Dance School's 2nd anniversary

By CLARISSA V. DAVID
clarissa_david@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Rose Dance School will mark its second anniversary with a program on Sept. 3, highlighting the significance of dance in achieving a sound mind and body.

Carol Wong Chan, who co-manages the family-owned dance school located on the second floor of Canton Restaurant, revealed in an interview how much she loves dancing.

"My sisters and I, we all love ballroom dancing," Chan told Saipan Tribune, referring to Anna Chan and Rose Chan, the school's namesake.

This love for dancing, Chan said, led them to open Rose Dance School, which offers aerobics, ballroom, and Latin dance classes.

Chan emphasized that dancing is not only a fun activity but it also provides a lot of benefits for those who do it regularly.

Chan said that dancing burns up to 400 calories per hour, increases energy levels, increases flexibility, sharpens coordination and reaction time, improves posture, attitude and mental health, and helps reduce stress levels.

To convey the importance of dancing, Chan said they took part in the highly successful Wise Women Village Project of the Department of Public Health, reaching out to more women in the community.

"We started out with doing just aerobics but it wasn't exciting," Chan disclosed. "So we decided to put more dance moves and make it more interesting."

Chan is inviting the community to join them in their anniversary program, to be held in their dance studio at 8pm.

An entrance fee of $3, inclusive of one drink, will be charged for each guest.

Chan also encouraged them to enroll in any of their dance classes. Aerobics classes are held at the 4-H Club in Susupe Monday to Friday, from 7pm to 8:30pm, for only $1 per visit. Aerobics classes are also available at the Carolinian Utt in Garapan from Monday to Thursday, 6pm to 7:30pm.

Ballroom and Latin Dance classes, meanwhile, are available for special groups and are held Monday to Saturday from 5:30pm to 6:30pm. Individual lessons are also available by appointment and cost $50 per four sessions.

Chan added that Friday nights are ballroom nights at Rose Dance School. An entrance fee of $5, inclusive of one drink, is charged from 9pm to 12:30am. Ballroom classes are also available on Saturdays from 6pm to 8pm.

"Come and join us in celebrating our second anniversary by dancing the night away," said Chan.

Taste of India restaurant manager Aji Thomas Mandumpala.

By CLARISSA V. DAVID
clarissa_david@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Craving for naan bread, tandoori, and curry dishes? Check out the Taste of India, the only Indian restaurant on Saipan, now under new management.

Restaurant manager Aji Thomas Mandumpala said that Taste of India is now owned by Thommenchandy Thomas, who came up with the combination of island and Indian themes in reintroducing the restaurant.

Mandumpala said the new restaurant owner wants everyone on island to savor authentic Indian cuisine—which is fast becoming popular worldwide—by making it accessible and affordable.

“Now that Taste of India is under new management, our customers can expect and enjoy not just our menu items at significantly reduced prices but also our great customer service,” he told Saipan Tribune.

Dinner and lunch buffets

Taste of India has come up with new and exciting offers for its customers, starting with its Saturday dinner buffet.

Mandumpala said this is the first time that Taste of India decided to offer a Saturday dinner buffet, launched only a week ago.

The Saturday dinner buffet features the famous Tandoori dish, which is marinated overnight in a combination of mughlai Masala and sour cream cooked in a clay oven, and other Indian fares that are not usually offered in a regular buffet. The spice index for buffet is between mild and medium.

The buffet costs only $10— inclusive of one glass of any wine or a bottle of any beer—and is available from 6pm to 10pm. Children 8 years old and below are free of charge.

Mandumpala said the Saturday dinner buffet is intended for those who are not able to try their lunch buffet for lack of time. The buffet is also good for families who want to spend time together over dinner as it also includes dishes that even children can enjoy.

“We’ve already received a lot of good comments from our customers since we introduced the Saturday dinner buffet,” he added.

For its lunch buffet, Taste of India serves eight different Indian dishes, Indian bread, fresh salad, assorted fruits, and refillable iced tea for only $9.99. The buffet is available Monday to Friday, from 11am to 2pm.

A la carte, bar menus

Taste of India also has a wide selection of a la carte fares that cost between $2 and $12.95.

Start your meal with appetizers such as Masala Papad, crispy fried and spicy Indian appetizers ($2) or the Samosa, pyramid-shaped Indian pastry stuffed with lamb, chicken, beef or vegetables and served with sauce ($5).

For the main course, try any of their Tandoori treasures—curry, lamb, beef, pork, seafood, and vegetarian specialties.

End on a sweet note with Gulab Jamun, an Indian specialty dessert served with a scoop of ice cream and fruits ($5) or Lassi, a yogurt-based Indian drink available in three flavors: mango, sweet, and salt & plain ($4.50).

Taste of India also has an extensive bar selection that includes whiskeys, brandy, domestic and premium beers, wines, and popular cocktails.

“We have happy hour everyday from 5pm to 8pm. Beers are only $2 per bottle while cocktails are just $3.50 each,” said Mandumpala.

He said they are also giving away discount cards that offer 5- to 15-percent discount rates to cardholders, depending on the frequency of visits.

Besides Mandumpala, Taste of India staff includes Dinesh Thomas Kachappilly, Saratbhal Panikkasery, Radhika G. Itani, and Liza Comon.

Rota east harbor project to be funded by a USDA grant

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Rota Legislative Delegation chair Sen. Juan Ayuyu (Ind-Rota) disclosed yesterday that in the absence of a go-signal from the Office of Insular Affairs to use 702 funds for the construction of the island’s east harbor, its members and the municipality have decided to explore other funding sources for the project.

The delegation appropriated $25 million last year from the government’s 702 monies for the Rota harbor improvement. The decision was reached in order to address the long history of an unsafe harbor entrance and berthing area on Rota that has hampered shipping and economic development.

Ayuyu revealed that after consulting the Executive Branch, it was agreed upon to take a new approach for the project. He said the U.S. Department of Agriculture will now fund the project.

However, the grant allows only non-profit organizations to handle the project. The Rota municipality and the delegation are in the process of creating a non-profit group that will apply for the grant. As of yesterday, documents for the registration of the non-profit organization were being finalized.

“This is totally a different approach from the original. We will be receiving the $25 million grant [from USDA] and without any involvement of the government [in repayment],” the senator said.

Ayuyu declined to name the non-profit group being formed but reiterated that it will be the expenditure authority of the grant and will have full responsibility for the project.

“We didn’t receive the authorization from OIA to use the 702 monies. Because of the urgency of this project, we made the decision to take another approach and we’re very optimistic that it will work,” he said.

Rota’s current harbor is on the west side of the island.

Without Jobs, Apple must show it can still deliver

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—With Steve Jobs bowing out as CEO, Apple Inc. must persuade investors and consumers that it doesn't need the force behind the iMac, iPod, iPhone and iPad in charge to keep the technology hits coming.

Tim Cook, his hand-picked successor, has handled the top job repeatedly in the absence of the ailing Jobs, who resigned as chief executive Wednesday and was elected chairman of Apple's board. Though not nearly as recognizable as Jobs, Cook had been running Apple since January. The company's stock has risen 62 percent during that time.

Jeff Gamet, managing editor of Apple-focused news site The Mac Observer, said Jobs' departure has more sentimental than practical significance. He said he has been telegraphing the change for several years.

"All Apple really has done is made official what they've been doing administratively for a while now, which is Tim runs the show and Steve gets to do his part to make sure the products come out to meet the Apple standard," he said.

But Trip Chowdhry, an analyst with Global Equities Research, said Jobs' maniacal attention to detail is what has set Apple apart. He said Apple's product pipeline might be secure for another few years, but he predicted that the company will eventually struggle to come up with market-changing ideas.

"Apple is Steve Jobs, Steve Jobs is Apple, and Steve Jobs is innovation," Chowdhry said. "You can teach people how to be operationally efficient, you can hire consultants to tell you how to do that, but God creates innovation. ... Apple without Steve Jobs is nothing."

Jobs' resignation appears to be the result of an unspecified medical condition for which he took a leave from his post in January.

In a letter addressed to Apple's board and the "Apple community," Jobs said he "always said if there ever came a day when I could no longer meet my duties and expectations as Apple's CEO, I would be the first to let you know. Unfortunately, that day has come."

Jobs' health has long been a concern for Apple investors, who see him as an oracle of technology. He had previously survived pancreatic cancer and received a liver transplant.

The company said Jobs gave the board his resignation Wednesday and suggested that Cook, Apple's chief operating officer, be named the company's new leader. Apple also said Cook is becoming a member of its board.

Genentech Inc. Chairman Art Levinson, in a statement issued on behalf of Apple's board, said Jobs' "extraordinary vision and leadership saved Apple and guided it to its position as the world's most innovative and valuable technology company."

He said that Jobs will continue to provide "his unique insights, creativity and inspiration," and that the board has "complete confidence" that Cook is the right person to replace him.

"Tim's 13 years of service to Apple have been marked by outstanding performance, and he has demonstrated remarkable talent and sound judgment in everything he does," Levinson said.

Earlier this month Apple briefly became the most valuable company in America, surpassing Exxon Mobil. At the market close Wednesday, Apple's value was $349 billion, just behind Exxon Mobil's $358 billion.

Jobs' hits seemed to grow bigger as the years went on: After the colorful iMac computer and the now-ubiquitous iPod, the iPhone redefined the category of smartphones and the iPad all but created the market for tablet computers.

To stay or go? Officials ponder Irene evacuations

HATTERAS, N.C. (AP)—Hurricane Irene could hit anywhere from North Carolina to New York this weekend, leaving officials in the path of uncertainty to make a delicate decision. Should they tell tourists to leave during one of the last weeks of the multibillion-dollar summer season?

Most were in a wait-and-see mode, holding out to get every dime before the storm's path crystalizes. North Carolina's governor told reporters not to scare people away.

"You will never endanger your tourists, but you also don't want to over inflate the sense of urgency about the storm. And so let's just hang on," North Carolina Gov. Beverly Perdue said Wednesday. At the same time she warned to "prepare for the worst."

In the Bahamas, tourists cut their vacations short and caught the last flights out before the airport was closed. Those who remained behind with locals prepared for a rough night of violent winds and a dangerous storm surge that threatened to punish the low-lying chain of islands. Irene has already hit Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic, causing landslides and flooding homes. One woman was killed.

On the Outer Banks of North Carolina, some tourists heeded evacuation orders for a tiny barrier island as Irene strengthened to a Category 3 storm, with winds of 120 mph (193 kph).

"We jam-packed as much fun as we could into the remainder of Tuesday," said Jessica Stanton Tice of Charleston, W.Va.

"We're still going to give North Carolina our vacation business, but we're going to Asheville" in the mountains, she said.

Officials said Irene could cause flooding, power outages or worse as far north as Maine, even if the eye of the storm stays offshore. Hurricane-force winds were expected 50 miles from the center of the storm.

Panel: Captain who made videos can stay in Navy

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—The former commander of a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier who produced raunchy videos aboard the USS Enterprise can remain in the Navy despite a finding that he committed misconduct, a Navy panel ruled Wednesday.

Capt. Owen P. Honors let out a sigh of relief after the board of inquiry read its decision, then embraced his wife after months of uncertainty about his career largely came to a close. The board was deciding whether to recommend to Navy Secretary Ray Mabus that Honors should be kicked out of the Navy after nearly three decades of service because of the videos. Among other things, the videos included simulated same-sex shower scenes, anti-gay slurs and references to prostitution in foreign ports.

Honors also faced the possibility of losing hundreds of thousands of dollars in retirement benefits if he had been forced out under a different pay grade.

"O.P. is pleased," Honors' attorney, Charles Gittins, told reporters following the hearing. "Retention is a big deal. He has the advantage now of leaving now on his terms."

Honors was removed as the carrier's top officer in January days before a scheduled deployment after several of the videos were leaked to media outlets. He was reassigned to administrative duties because of the videos and Honors believes an officer he had recently disciplined on the ship was responsible for the leak, which he considers an act of revenge.

It was not immediately clear what jobs Honors' may hold in the future, but it is unlikely he would return to the Enterprise. A new commanding officer took control of the ship last week, replacing the commanding officer who was called in for a six month deployment following Honors' dismissal.

Ky. jury rules against penis amputation patient

SHELBYVILLE, Ky. (AP)—A Kentucky truck driver who was wheeled into surgery for a simple circumcision but awoke without part of his penis lost his multimillion-dollar lawsuit Wednesday against the urologist who lopped off a cancer-riddled section of the organ.

A six-man, six-woman jury deliberated briefly before saying it didn't agree with 64-year-old Phillip Seaton and his wife, Deborah, that Dr. John Patterson had failed to exercise proper care. Seaton also sued because he said he hadn't consented to the amputation.

The doctor said he decided to amputate less than an inch of the penis after he found potentially deadly cancer during surgery in 2007. The rest of the penis was taken off later by another doctor.

Patterson testified that when he cut the foreskin, the tip of the penis had the appearance of rotten cauliflower, indicating cancer. A pathologist later testified that tests confirmed the diagnosis. "What I saw was not a penis. What I saw was cancer," Patterson had testified.

WikiLeaks: Ma sees Taiwan-China political talks

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP)—Taiwan’s president told the outgoing head of the United States Pacific Command that “activities” by China’s People’s Liberation Army could force the island into political talks with Beijing, according to an American diplomatic cable released by WikiLeaks.

The cable described a meeting between President Ma Ying-jeou and Adm. (Ret.) Timothy Keating on Dec. 15, 2009—weeks after Keating left his PACOM post. Keating was one of the most senior American officials involved in planning the U.S. military posture in the western Pacific, including in the Taiwan Strait, the 100-mile- (160-kilometer-) wide maritime corridor dividing mainland China from Taiwan.

“Despite warming economic ties,” the American cable quoted Ma as saying, “(China’s) military posture across the Strait remains unchanged. PLA activities in recent months demonstrated that Taiwan may need to move beyond economic discussions into political discussions with the mainland.”

China and Taiwan split amid civil war in 1949, and Beijing continues to regard the island as part of its territory, to be taken over by persuasion if possible, by force if necessary.

Upon taking office in May 2008, Ma pivoted sharply away from his predecessor’s anti-China policies, engaging Beijing in a series of economic agreements that have helped to lower tensions between the sides to their lowest level in six decades.

However, Ma has been consistently wary of moving that engagement into the political sphere, not least because many Taiwanese fear that such discussions could be used by the mainland as a wedge to undermine democratic Taiwan’s de facto independence.

Japan utility knew of tsunami threat: government

TOKYO (AP)—Japan’s nuclear regulator said Wednesday that the operator of a crippled nuclear plant knew it might be hit by a far bigger tsunami than it was designed to withstand.

The Nuclear and Industrial Safety Agency said the operator informed it just four days before Japan’s massive March 11 earthquake and tsunami that waves exceeding 10 meters (33 feet) could hit the Fukushima Dai-ichi nuclear plant.

The plant was only designed to withstand a tsunami about half that height.

Agency officials said Wednesday they recommended that Tokyo Electric Power Co. take measures to prepare for a bigger tsunami but did not give specific instructions.

The March tsunami hit the plant with waves higher than 15 meters (49 feet), destroying its cooling systems, triggering explosions and fires and sending large amounts of radiation into the environment. The cores of three of the plant’s six reactors melted within a few days.

NISA spokesman Yoshinori Moriyama told a news conference Wednesday that TEPCO officials visited the agency on March 7 with calculations showing that a tsunami higher than 10 meters could hit Fukushima Dai-ichi. Moriyama said TEPCO officials used a piece of paper to explain their findings but did not submit any documents.

Libyans at Manila embassy smash Gadhafi portraits

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—Diplomats and expats at Libya’s embassy in Manila smashed portraits of Moammar Gadhafi and raised the rebel flag in the latest in a months-long wave of defections against the longtime leader at Libyan missions worldwide. Libyan consul Faraj Zarroug says about 85 percent of his country’s 165 diplomatic missions around the globe have recognized the interim rebel government, National Transitional Council. Zarroug says Gadhafi’s power has plummeted, adding: “It’s game over.” Diplomats at the mission in the Philippine capital pulled down Gadhafi’s green flag and raised the rebel one Wednesday while young expatriates smashed glass-covered portraits.

China executes man for running over Mongol herder

BEIJING (AP)—China has executed a truck driver for killing an ethnic Mongol herder in a case that sparked Inner Mongolia’s largest demonstrations in 20 years. The official Xinhua News Agency said in a brief report that Li Lindong was executed Aug. 18. The report, dated Aug. 19, was posted to a regional news website and appeared to not be widely circulated. The herder, Mergen, who like many Mongols uses just one name, was killed May 10 while he and others were blocking the road through their village to protest noise and pollution produced by coal trucks transiting the grasslands. Police said Li ran over Mergen and then dragged his body for 160 yards (145 meters) before he died.

Libyan rebels hunt Gadhafi

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP)—Libyans hunting Moammar Gadhafi offered a $2 million bounty on the fallen dictator's head and amnesty for anyone who kills or captures him as rebels battled Wednesday to clear the last pockets of resistance from the capital Tripoli.

While some die-hard loyalists kept up the fight to defend Gadhafi, his support was crumbling by the hour. His deputy intelligence chief defected, and even his foreign minister said his 42-year rule was over.

A defiant Gadhafi vowed from hiding to fight on "until victory or martyrdom," in an audio message early Wednesday.

He may have little choice. Asked by the British broadcaster Channel 4 if a negotiated settlement or safe passage for Gadhafi from Libya was still possible, Foreign Minister Abdul Ati al-Obeidi said: "It looks like things have passed this kind of solution."

Rebel leaders were beginning to set up a new government in the capital. Their interim administration, the National Transitional Council, has been based in the eastern city of Benghazi, which fell under rebel control shortly after the outbreak of widespread protests in February.

"Members of the council are now moving one by one from Benghazi to Tripoli," said Mansour Seyf al-Nasr, the Libyan opposition's new ambassador to France.

Rebel officials are eager to prove they can bring a stable political future to Libya, and that their movement is more than an often-fractious collection of tribes, ethnicities and semiautonomous militias. Mahmoud Jibril, the head of the opposition government, outlined plans for a new constitution and elections and said officials were talking to the U.N. about sending up to 200 monitors to help ensure security in Tripoli.

But the capital was far from pacified. A day after rebels captured Gadhafi's vast Bab al-Aziziya compound, the symbolic center of his regime, loyalists were firing into the compound from an adjacent neighborhood where intense clashes broke out. Pro-regime snipers cut off the road to the airport. Four Italian journalists were kidnapped on the highway to Tripoli around the city of Zawiya, 30 miles west of the capital.

WORLD BRIEFS

Hurricane Irene batters smaller islands of Bahamas

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP)—A large and powerful Hurricane Irene roared across the Bahamas archipelago on Wednesday, knocking down trees and destroying homes on a path that officials said posed the greatest threat to the country's smaller, less-populated islands. There were no immediate reports of major injuries or deaths but property damage appeared likely to be extensive. Acklins and Crooked islands, in the southern part of the chain, got hit particularly hard, with an estimated 90 percent of the homes in two settlements severely damaged or destroyed, said Capt. Stephen Russell, director of the country's National Emergency Management Agency.

Clashes, disruptions as strike begins in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)—Protesters supporting a 48-hour strike called by student groups, unions and opposition politicians threw up burning barricades and clashed with police Wednesday to demand fundamental changes in Chile. The government said 36 people—19 police officers and 17 civilians—were injured and 348 people detained over the course of the day. Earlier, police Maj. Christian Kuntzman said one injured officer was shot in the hand.

OFFBEAT BRIEFS

Hawk swoops inside NYC apartment building

NEW YORK (AP)—A red-tailed hawk caused quite a stir after flying through an open window of a five-story New York City apartment building. Tenant Joe Moderski says he thought he had missed a pillow fight because there were so many feathers in the hallway of the Upper West Side building. Moderski says he arrived home around 3:30 p.m. Sunday to find the hawk outside his top-floor apartment. He says the raptor flew at him, just missing his face, so he took off running. Two emergency service police officers eventually caught the bird and took it to the city’s Animal Care and Control center.

Fake pterodactyl nabs surfer in statue prank

CARDIFF-BY-THE-SEA, Calif. (AP)—A bronze surfer statue near San Diego that’s been the target of many gags has been hit again. Unknown pre-dawn pranksters on Saturday constructed an elaborate scene of a pterodactyl seemingly about to pluck the sculpture of a young surfer off his board. The pranksters placed a painted backdrop of a volcanic eruption behind the surfer statue. The Los Angeles Times reports crowds of gawkers and photographers gathered around the 16-foot creation after the sun rose. Last year someone surrounded the roadside statue in Cardiff-by-the-Sea with a papier mache model of a great white shark that appeared to be swallowing it whole.

Arizona man accused of stuffing snakes down shorts

PHOENIX (AP)—Police say an Arizona man stole several baby albino boa constrictors at a pet store by stuffing them in his shorts. Eric Fiegel was arrested Tuesday after police reviewed surveillance footage from Predator’s Reptile Center in Mesa. They say a July 30 video shows the 22-year-old man entering the store, removing several snakes from their cage and placing them in the pocket of his shorts before exiting the store without paying. Police say Fiegel then traveled to another pet store and traded several of the snakes for $175 and a large reptile tank.

Ore. city dumps mayor for not showing up for work

SODAVILLE, Ore. (AP)—A small city in Oregon has kicked out its mayor for not showing up to work. The Albany Democrat-Herald reports that Sodaville replaced 35-year-old Brady Harrington with the city council’s president. The newspaper says Harrington missed council meetings in June and July, along with skipping three budget meetings. The new mayor, Nick Heineck, says Harrington was occupied as a firefighter and student, but would not commit to returning to meetings when council members reached him by phone this week. Harrington declined to resign.

Ariz. street sign prank warns of ‘rogue panda’

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP)—Authorities in Flagstaff, Ariz., are assuring residents there are no rogue pandas roaming the city after some pranksters got creative with an electronic street sign. The Arizona Department of Transportation-controlled sign was set up to warn drivers not to make left turns at a busy intersection. But motorists heading to work Monday morning got an entirely different message: “Rogue panda on rampage.” A passer-by reported the hacked sign to police at about 3 a.m. Monday. Transportation Department spokeswoman Mackenzie Nuno says the sign was restored to its original message by 11 a.m.

What to look for in a TV

By ANNE KRISHNAN
THE NEWS & OBSERVER

QUESTION: I have never bought a new TV and now at 45 find myself interested in/in need of a new TV. I work in technology marketing and am pretty tech-savvy, but frankly have not kept up with TV technology. I want a midsize flat screen that will give me a lot of years of use, is HD compatible and that I can network into my computers.

I have finally sworn off cable, so I will be looking for reception alternatives. I now watch most TV programs through downstream recordings or Netflix, and really only watch news or some sporting events live. Given the above, what should I look for in a TV?—S.M.

ANSWER: The flat-panel TV market has become extremely competitive, and for the most part, the quality of the sets available now is fantastic, said Leon Shaw, chairman and founder of Audio Advice, a Raleigh, N.C., home entertainment technology company.

Even so, a shopping tip: If you don't need the very latest features, buy last year's model as soon as the current year's model comes out. There are two benefits to this strategy. You can see a year's worth of reviews before you buy, and you can get a better price.

Now, on to size. The size of your TV depends on the size of your room and how far you'll be sitting from the TV. Tech site CNET.com recommends buying at least a 32-inch TV for a bedroom and at least 40 inches for a living room or main TV. Another rule of thumb, CNET reviewer David Katzmaier writes, is to place your seating no closer to the TV than 1.5 times the screen's diagonal measurement and no farther than twice that measurement.

So for a viewing distance of 5 to 7 feet, you'd want to consider a 40-inch TV; 6 to 8 feet, you'd look for a 50-inch TV; and 7.5 to 10 feet, you'd pick a 60-inch TV.

When you're talking flat screens, the main two types of monitors are LED/LCD and plasma. Shaw thinks the current plasma sets have the best and most natural picture quality. They have also gotten more energy-efficient, and most are Energy-Star rated. If you have a room that might have light reflecting off your set, LED would be the better choice. But in a controlled light environment, he would pick plasma.

By the way, as TVs have gotten thinner, their audio has gotten poorer. You might want to make room in your budget for a sound bar, if not a speaker system, Shaw said.

Once you get your TV home, the first thing you should do is to adjust your picture settings. Most TVs have been tuned up to overcome the harsh store lighting that manufacturers know the sets will be displayed in, and yours must be adjusted for your home.

"It makes a huge difference, which is actually greater than any difference you would find between good quality brands if all settings were equal," Shaw said.

If you purchased your TV from an A/V specialty dealer, they will typically do this for you, he said. If not, there are several set-up discs that will walk you through the process. The best-selling on Amazon.com is "Disney WOW: World of Wonder," sold in versions for Blu-ray and regular DVD players for about $26.

Now for content. While connectivity within your TV is important to some degree, more important is the content box that you're connecting it to. As technology progresses, it's easy and relatively cheap to switch out your box.

For the most choices in streaming content, you'll want to consider Roku, says Jeremy Behrens, an IT consultant in Audubon, N.J. This little box allows you to stream channels including Netflix, Hulu Plus, Amazon Instant Video and Pandora.

He recommends the most expensive $100 version for its USB port, which would allow you to stream music, video or photos to your TV from your local network, and for its dual-band wireless N connection, which should allow you a better signal quality for the data. Other versions are $60 and $80.

Another option is the Apple TV, which retails for $99 but doesn't have as many streaming choices as Roku, Shaw said. "For someone looking to cut the cable cord, Roku is the best choice," he agreed.

Most mainstream TVs also have a Web browser built in for accessing content, along with things like Netflix and Hulu, but the interface is not as good as Roku's, he said.

One final note. The best thing Behrens can recommend to anyone who wants to cut the cord on cable TV completely is to invest in a wired network connection to your new TV or streaming device. This means running a cable directly from your router to the box.

"Streaming video consumes a lot of bandwidth, and there is sometimes just too much information in an HD video stream to push out over Wi-Fi," he said.

However, if you must use wireless to connect your streaming device to your network, he recommends that you make sure that the device and your router support the latest 802.11n ("wireless N") technology.

Pacino, 'Scarface' cast celebrate film's legacy

By SANDY COHEN
AP ENTERTAINMENT WRITER

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Al Pacino says he got burned while making "Scarface."

Literally, he grabbed the hot barrel of a gun that had just shot 30 rounds during one of Tony Montana's violent scenes.

"My hand stuck to that sucker," the 71-year-old actor recalled. He couldn't work for two weeks.

Pacino relayed the experience during a discussion with "Scarface" co-stars Steven Bauer, Robert Loggia and F. Murray Abraham and producer Martin Bregman at a party in Los Angeles Tuesday heralding the film's Blu-ray release.

Part of the charm of the film, Pacino said, is that it wasn't initially a hit.

"It's one of my favorites because of its whole evolution," he said. "It (was) sort of eviscerated after it opened by the press. ... Nobody was fond of it, except it had good audience participation."

He said "it's almost a miracle" audiences continue to discover and appreciate the film.

He wanted to make it after being inspired by Paul Muni's performance in the 1932 original. Sidney Lumet suggested he make the main character Cuban instead of Italian.

Pacino's "Scarface" is set in 1980s Miami, and Tony Montana is an ambitious immigrant who runs a growing drug empire until he eventually collapses under greed and addiction. Pacino's performance as the gun-wielding, coke-snorting Montana is among his most memorable.

He said that during the nine months he was shooting the film, his character practically inhabited him. When a friend's yappy little dog lunged at him, Pacino said he cocked back his fist instinctively, as if threatening a punch.

"So I love Tony Montana, man, because I couldn't do that!" Pacino said Tuesday.

Bregman called "Scarface" a "perfect, perfect movie."

Its timeless themes of greed, desire and ambition would make it controversial even if it were just released today, Pacino said.

Screenwriter Oliver Stone and director Brian De Palma were both "trying to talk about the avarice of the '80s," Pacino said. "At that time, there was this whole thing about greed, which was Wall Street and everything, and I think that's part of it. A great character, too, Tony Montana—a person who dares to do anything, who flies like a Phoenix, like Icarus, close to the sun."

Longtime LA beat poet Scott Wannberg dead at 58

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Scott Wannberg's poems were wildly colorful, sometimes off the wall, frequently in your face and just as often very funny.

In other words, they were like the author.

Wannberg, whose garrulous personality and bearish build cast a huge shadow over the Los Angeles poetry scene for decades, died Friday at his home in Florence, Ore., his longtime friend and fellow poet, S.A. Griffin, told The Associated Press. He was 58.

The cause of death was not immediately known, but Wannberg had been in declining health and had moved to Oregon two years ago to be closer to family.

Prolific to the end of his life, Wannberg gave hundreds of readings, published 10 volumes of poetry and was often included in anthologies, among them "The Outlaw Bible of American Poetry."

His stream-of-consciousness, beat-influenced style, noted for its colorful, often humorous language, touched on seemingly every subject that came to the author's mind: from the death of a beloved cat to the war in Iraq, politics to movies, the wealthy of Los Angeles' West Side to the destitute of its Skid Row.

"His poetry was Scott," Griffin said Wednesday. "He was a unique, one-of-a-kind human being who, as they say, they broke the mold when they made such a character as him."

As two of the founding members of the experimental poetry group the Carma Bums, Wannberg and Griffin made nearly a dozen tours of North America over 20 years, giving readings in cities from the Southwest to Canada. Their last trip was in 2009.

For most of those journeys, the group piled into a vintage 1959 Cadillac they named Farther, a nod to author Ken Kesey's Merry Prankster bus, Further.

As the years and the tours rolled by, Wannberg picked up an eclectic variety of admirers, including not only fellow poets but prominent novelists and actors. The author T.C. Boyle, in a 2008 essay in the Los Angeles Times, called him "one of the true literary zealots of our time."

Boyle, recalling their first meeting in a Los Angeles bookstore in 1985, said that within minutes of that introduction, "Scott was piling my arms high with books I absolutely just had to read. He had a sixth sense, knowing exactly what I wanted and needed."

Winehouse album becomes century's bestseller

LONDON (AP)—Amy Winehouse is still hitting music milestones after her untimely death last month.

Britain's Official Charts Company says Winehouse's Grammy-award winning "Back to Black" has become the best-selling album in the U.K. in the 21st century.

The company, which tracks music sales in the U.K., said Wednesday that "Back to Black" overtook James Blunt's 2005 debut album to claim the title this week.

Winehouse's second album had jumped to the No. 1 spot on the charts shortly after the soul singer was found dead in her London town house on July 23. An initial post-mortem failed to determine cause of death, and Winehouse's family said Tuesday that toxicology tests showed she had no illegal drugs in her system when she died.

An inquest into Winehouse's death begins in October.

Ashton Kutcher teases Letterman about fatwa

NEW YORK (AP)—Like David Letterman, Ashton Kutcher isn't afraid of a little fatwa humor.

Kutcher taped an appearance for Letterman's talk show Wednesday, and the actor came on stage wearing a helmet and a bulletproof vest printed with the phrase, "Not Dave."

Last week, a contributor to a jihadist website posted a threat of violence against Letterman because the comedian had made fun of al-Qaida leaders on a previous show. Letterman, back from vacation Monday, played the threat for monologue laughs.

During Wednesday's taping,

Letterman asked Kutcher if his bowtie was bullet-proof. The actor replied that "you can't be too careful" sitting next to a guy facing a threat.

Kutcher joined CBS' "Two and a Half Men" after Charlie Sheen was fired. He and Letterman predicted success for the revamped sitcom.

Paris Hilton's ex takes DUI plea deal in Vegas

LAS VEGAS (AP)—Paris Hilton's ex-boyfriend was fined $585 and ordered Wednesday to stay out of trouble as he settled drug charges stemming from a Las Vegas Strip traffic stop with the celebrity socialite last year.

Cy Waits, 35, was sentenced after pleading no contest to misdemeanor driving under the influence of drugs. Felony and misdemeanor drug charges were dropped.

Las Vegas Justice of the Peace Bill Kephart ordered Waits to attend DUI and "victim impact" classes, gave him a 30-day suspended jail sentence, and warned him not to make the same mistake twice.

"If you are arrested for another DUI during the pendency of this case, I don't care if it's alcohol or drugs, you will do six months in the Clark County jail," the judge said. He set a Nov. 23 date to review Waits' case.

Waits emerged from the courtroom with his lawyer, Richard Schonfeld, and said he was glad to have the case behind him.

The former Las Vegas nightclub manager declined to talk about his relationship with Hilton, calling it a "chapter in my life that's closed."

Waits was arrested Aug. 27, 2010, after a Las Vegas police officer reported a "vapor trail" of marijuana smoke wafting from a black Cadillac Escalade with Waits at the wheel.

Glenn Beck hosts rally in Old City of Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP)—Former Fox TV personality Glenn Beck capped a contentious visit to Israel Wednesday by hosting a rally next to a hotly disputed holy site in Jerusalem's Old City.

Hundreds of supporters, including Israeli politicians, were on hand to hear the commentator in the final leg of his "Restoring Courage" tour of the Holy Land. A small group of protesters held banners saying "Glenn Beck, go home."

Beck's unabashedly pro-Israel, anti-Muslim rhetoric has endeared him to some on Israel's far-right. But religious figures and left-wing politicians have come together in an unusual alliance appealing to Israelis to shun his embrace.

Religious Jews are worried he is here to spread the Christian gospel, while dovish Israelis reject Beck's support for West Bank Jewish settlements and his criticism of peace efforts.

Wednesday's rally was held next to the compound known to Jews as the Temple Mount and to Muslims as the Noble Sanctuary.

Hot car and frozen chicken are a dangerous combination

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

DEAR ABBY: My husband purchased a bag of individually wrapped frozen chicken breasts during his lunch break. After work, we took our kids to a concert and didn't return home until 8 p.m. The bag of chicken was in his trunk for seven hours on a hot summer day.

My husband thought it was OK to refreeze the meat and feed this to our kids, ages 6 and 2. I adamantly disagreed. What are your thoughts? We've had this argument before.

Dear Abby

NO WAY! IN SAN JOSE

DEAR NO WAY!: Your husband is SERIOUSLY off base. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, "cold food"—such as chicken, fish, raw meat—should be purchased just before leaving the market and the shopper should plan to drive directly home. Always refrigerate perishable food within two hours, and when the temperature is above 90 degrees Fahrenheit, it should be refrigerated within one hour! Food left in the car for the length of time your husband did is no longer fit for human consumption and could have made your children seriously ill.

Readers, for the answers to food safety questions, the USDA can be contacted on the Internet at AskKaren.gov. Submit a question there and it will be answered. The USDA also has a Meat and Poultry Hotline, (888) 674-6854, which is open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband and I divorced seven years ago. He has remarried, and I also recently married again. He is still bitter toward me. His emotional abuse was partly to blame for our split, although I was not entirely without fault. I made mistakes, too, which I regret.

Two of my children hold me responsible for the divorce and continually throw my mistakes back in my face. I walk on eggshells around them. I have apologized repeatedly and asked their forgiveness. I'm afraid of losing contact with my grandchildren every time one of my kids becomes upset about the past.

I have been to counseling, but was told I just have to be happy with me. Is there a way my children can finally forgive me for the past? I'm not a bad person, just a flawed one.

HUMAN IN ONTARIO, CANADA

DEAR HUMAN: We're all flawed, including your children. If they are determined that blame for the divorce falls solely on you, while absolving your emotionally abusive husband, nothing you or I can do will change their minds.

You have paid your therapist good money for the sensible advice you received, so please heed it. The longer you continue to walk on eggshells and tolerate the treatment you are receiving, the longer it will continue. Concentrate on your own life, and far more happiness will result than what you're experiencing now.

DEAR ABBY: Many letters you print come from women who seem shocked because they've ended up with men who have little or no character. However, I have never dated a man who could hide his true colors longer than six months.

You often advise these women to seek counseling or an attorney, but for the millions of women who haven't yet made these mistakes, how about a shout-out for prevention? Amazingly, not getting legally attached and not allowing yourself to become pregnant by a man you've known only a few weeks isn't considered common sense anymore.

The heart is ungovernable, but people do have absolute control over using birth control and getting married. What percentage of women's problems do you think could be avoided if, for the first year of dating someone, they used birth control 100 percent of the time and didn't rush to get married?

PERPLEXED IN PEORIA

DEAR PERPLEXED: I'd say about 50 percent—but I may be underestimating by a long shot.

Colts agree to terms with QB Kerry Collins

This Dec. 9, 2010, file photo shows Indianapolis Colts quarterback Peyton Manning (18) shaking hands with Tennessee Titans quarterback Kerry Collins after the Colts beat the Titans 30-28 in an NFL football game, in Nashville, Tenn.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—The Indianapolis Colts are bringing one veteran quarterback out of retirement.

No, not Brett Favre.

The Colts agreed to terms Wednesday with Kerry Collins, making him the likely starter in case Peyton Manning hasn't completely recovered from offseason neck surgery when the season opens Sept. 11.

Collins said he has been given no indication that Manning won't play at Houston.

"Hopefully, Peyton will be back, but if he's not maybe I can be one of the guys that can help this ball club," Collins said in a conference call with reporters Wednesday night. "The biggest draw for me coming here was just being with a team that I have a lot of respect for and a lot of history with, and really to be with a great team and play with one of the greatest quarterbacks of all time."

Collins agreed to a one-year contract and acknowledged he could be talked into staying longer than 2011.

Not everyone in the Colts locker room is enamored with the move.

"We don't even know him, we ain't vanilla, man, we ain't no simple offense," receiver Reggie Wayne said. "So for him to come in here and be the starter, I don't see it. I think that's a step back."

Colts coach Jim Caldwell wasn't available to talk with reporters about Collins, a player he coached at Penn State, because the official announcement didn't come until after practice. Caldwell spoke with reporters before practice. But he struck a calm tone in a statement released by the team.

"He is a veteran quarterback who has started many games and he brings dimension and depth to the quarterback position, which will be helpful," Caldwell said. "He is familiar with our division and will make a great addition to our roster."

The move is another indication that Manning's streak of 227 consecutive starts, including playoff games, is in serious jeopardy for the first time since 2008.

Manning had surgery May 23 to repair a nerve in his neck, and the recovery has gone slower than expected partially, Manning said, because he couldn't work out with team trainers during the 4 1/2-month lockout.

On Saturday morning, Colts owner Jim Irsay wrote on Twitter that the Colts should be prepared to play without Manning in the opener against the division-rival Texans. Later that day, Manning acknowledged he did not expect to play in the final two preseason games and that he would need the next two weeks just to get healthy.

Collins said the first call from Indy came Saturday, too.

Caldwell hasn't said when he expects Manning to return to the field after signing a five-year, $90 million contract to stay in Indy last month.

"I think he laid out pretty well where he is, and that he is working extremely hard to try and get back as quickly as he possibly can," Caldwell said Monday. "He's going to work hard at trying to get back and get ready, and he's doing everything he can to do so."

And if he's not ready? Well, there's Collins, who has played in 195 career games with Tennessee, New Orleans, the New York Giants, Oakland and Carolina before retiring in July.

Collins has a career 55.8 completion percentage and has thrown for 40,441 yards, 206 touchdowns and 195 interceptions. As the starter, Collins has led his team to the playoffs four times, including a Super Bowl appearance with the Giants in the 2000 season.

Wayne, a five-time Pro Bowl player and one of Manning's favorite targets, has supported backup Curtis Painter. And while he called Collins "a great guy," he said he was worried about the Colts getting better.

"Who says Kerry's going to be the starter?" Wayne said. "Just because we bring him in doesn't mean he's the starter. He's got to learn too, right? Unless they gave him a playbook months ago, he's got to learn to."

"I don't care who you are, I mean I'm not going to let anyone just come in here and just push someone (like Painter) aside like you're that dog now, you know what I mean?" Wayne added.

Painter has started both preseason games this year, completing 8-of-16 passes for 95 yards with no touchdowns and one interception. In Friday night's 16-3 loss to Washington, Painter managed only one first down and couldn't get the offense past its 29 despite playing the entire first half.

He hasn't played in a regular season game since 2009. Another backup, Dan Orlovsky, has played in 13 games in six NFL seasons, and the other quarterback on the roster is undrafted rookie Mike Hartline.

For his part, Painter doesn't expect it to take Collins long to get up to speed.

"He's a veteran guy, been around a while, I'm sure the terminology across the league isn't too different," Painter said. "I expect he'll come in and pick it up quite well."

Collins didn't waste any time getting started, either.

"It's going to be like learning a foreign language," he said. "The concepts will be the same, but the terms will be completely different and that's why I need to bust my tail and get in the classroom so I can get out there and operate the offense sooner rather than later, hopefully."

Before meeting, union shows members what NBA wants

NEW YORK (AP)—Negotiators for NBA owners and players will likely meet again next week. And the league will have to offer something different to interest the players.

The union has been holding regional meetings, informing its members just how harsh it believes the owners' proposal is for a new collective bargaining agreement. The league is seeking significant changes to the salary structure as a way to eliminate its losses, which it says totaled $300 million last season.

Players have balked at the demands, and players' association vice president Maurice Evans of Washington said Wednesday that when players are shown what the league wants, they are unified in their stance.

"When we're able to explain exactly what David Stern is asking for, it becomes so clear and evident that we cannot take this deal, and guys would be willing to not participate, to not play, if that's the offer to us," Evans told The Associated Press in a phone interview from Chicago, where the union was set to hold another meeting Thursday.

After that, Evans said the players hope to have a bargaining session with the league's negotiators next week, but that a specific day hadn't been locked down yet.

There has been only one session that included leadership from both sides since the league locked out the players on July 1 after the expiration of the old CBA. Stern said during a podcast with ESPN.com earlier this month that progress needed to be made by the end of Labor Day weekend or "we may be headed to a bad place."

Evans said one of reasons for the regional meetings is to refute some of the things the commissioner said during that lengthy interview, which he called "very misleading." More than 100 players have attended the three gatherings, in Los Angeles and Las Vegas last week before New York on Wednesday. Evans added they hope to schedule more in Houston and Atlanta.

Stern blamed the players for an unwillingness to seriously bargain after a meeting on Aug. 1 and accused them of backing out of another meeting. Evans believes Stern has been more aggressive in his tone because the numbers don't support the position the league says it is in after a successful 2010-11 season on and off the court.

"He has to go to extremes to try to prove his case and normally he doesn't negotiate through the media," Evans said.

The league has backed off its demand for non-guaranteed contracts in a new CBA, but still wants salaries cut by more than a third among other changes. The league has proposed a flexible salary cap that the players contend is really a hard cap, which would replace the current system that allows teams to exceed the cap through the use of various exceptions. Evans called the elimination of the exceptions a "total slap in the face to Michael Jordan and all the great players that came before us."

Both sides have filed charges against the other with the National Labor Relations Board, and the league also filed a lawsuit seeking to block the union from decertifying—which it hasn't indicated publicly it's considering at this time.

After a flurry of meetings in June before the deadline, the sides have felt they had little to talk about since. Owners quickly shot down the players' final proposal, saying it would have significantly raised salaries in the sixth year of the deal, and the union has been hoping for another offer from the league that hasn't and may not come.

"We just want something that's fair," Evans said. "We don't feel like their proposals have been in good faith at all. That's why we filed the suit with the NLRB."

Despite the differences, there's still time to make a deal without losing any of the season. During the 1998-99 work stoppage that reduced the season to 50 games, the league didn't cancel the start of training camps in early October until Sept. 24. Camps are scheduled to open Oct. 1 this season, with the regular season set to begin on Nov. 1.

But with no progress made since the lockout began, Evans seems to agree with Stern that something has to happen quickly.

"If a deal's to be made," he said, "it's going to have to be very soon."

Red Sox back on top, crush Rangers, 13-2

ARLINGTON, Texas
(AP)—The

Boston Red Sox returned to the top of the American League East standings in emphatic style Wednesday by crushing the West division-leading Texas Rangers 13-2.

David Ortiz had an RBI single on the first pitch he saw in 10 days and scored twice in his return from bursitis in his right heel.

Carl Crawford, Jacoby Ellsbury and Adrian Gonzalez hit two-run homers in consecutive innings for the Red Sox. Crawford matched a career high with his five RBIs.

Boston starter Josh Beckett (11-5) allowed one run over six innings.

Rays 3, Tigers 2, 10 innings

In St. Petersburg, Elliot Johnson got the game-ending hit on a fielder's choice in the 10th inning, giving Tampa Bay victory over Detroit.

Evan Longoria opened the 10th with an infield single off Rangers reliever Duane Below (0-2), but was forced out at second on Ben Zobrist's grounder. After a second out, Casey Kotchman was hit by a pitch and Sean Rodriguez walked to load the bases.

Johnson then hit a grounder to third baseman Brandon Inge, who elected to throw to second rather than home, but second baseman Ramon Santiago was late getting to the bag.

Athletics 6, Yankees 4

In New York, Coco Crisp homered twice and drove in five runs, including a three-run homer in the 10th inning that lifted Oakland over New York.

Crisp and No. 9 batter Scott Sizemore both went 4 for 4. Sizemore got the tying double off C.C. Sabathia in the eighth as the Athletics claimed a series win at Yankee Stadium, ending a woeful run of 10 consecutive series defeats by the pinstripes.

Angels 8, White Sox 0

In Anaheim, Jered Weaver pitched seven scoreless innings in his first start since signing an $85 million contract extension, directing Los Angeles win over Chicago.

Erick Aybar drove in three runs, Torii Hunter homered and Jeff Mathis had a two-run double for the Angels, who have won six straight to move within 2-1/2 games of Texas as the AL West rivals prepared for a week-end series at Rangers Ballpark.

Blue Jays 4, Royals 3

In Toronto, Brett Lawrie hit a tie-breaking home run in the seventh inning and Toronto held on to edge Kansas City.

Lawrie broke a 3-3 tie with a leadoff blast over left field. The rookie third baseman also hit an RBI triple in the fourth.

Toronto's Jose Bautista added his major league-leading 37th homer of the season.

Mariners 9, Indians 2

In Cleveland, Felix Hernandez struck out 10 batters to steer Seattle past Cleveland.

Hernandez (12-11) allowed two runs in six innings as the last-place Mariners took three of four from the fading-fast Indians. Cleveland dropped below .500 for the first time since April 3, and is 6-1/2 games behind AL Central-leading Detroit.

Wily Mo Pena hit a two-run homer in the fourth inning and his two-run double in the fifth knocked out Indians starter Josh Tomlin (12-7), who didn't get through the fifth for the first time in 37 career starts.

Orioles 6, Twins 1

In Minneapolis, Mark Reynolds homered to start a five-run fifth inning that powered Detroit past Minnesota.

In his first start in 11 days, Jeremy Guthrie (6-16) pitched seven strong innings despite shoulder soreness, striking out five.

Baltimore won a third straight for the first time since early June 6-10.

Mets 7, Phillies 4

In Philadelphia, the New York Mets snapped a five-game losing skid and avoided a series sweep with a win over the National League-leading Philadelphia Phillies.

New York starter Mike Pelfrey (7-10) allowed three in six innings, while Nick Evans and David Wright both homered for the Mets.

Pirates 2, Brewers 0

In Pittsburgh, Jason Grilli won his first game in nearly two years as Pittsburgh shut down Milwaukee.

Pirates starter Aaron Thompson pitched 4 1-3 innings scoreless in his major league debut, and Grilli (1-0) followed with 2 2-3 innings.

Cubs 3, Braves 2

In Chicago, the hosts ended Atlanta's six-game winning streak, costing the Braves a chance to make up ground on Philadelphia.

Alfonso Soriano's two-run homer fueled Chicago's three-run rally in the second inning. He also walked and was hit by a pitch. Aramis Ramirez added a single and two walks, extending his hitting streak to 13 games.

Diamondbacks 4, Nationals 2

In Washington, Arizona's Daniel Hudson fell one out short of his first career shutout, steering the Diamondbacks past Washington.

Hudson (13-9) allowed struck out six, walked none, had a run of 13 consecutive batters retired and threw 102 pitches. He had the Nationals blanked through 8 2-3 innings before giving up back-to-back homers.

Giants 2, Padres 1

In San Francisco, Carlos Beltran hit his first home run since being traded to San Francisco, helping the Giants edge San Diego.

Beltran, who had been out with a wrist injury, returned to the starting lineup and homered off Tim Stauffer (8-10) in the fourth inning for his first ever long shot at AT&T Park.

Giants sarter Tim Lincecum (12-10) struck out seven in eight innings. He gave up one run, and also hit the go-ahead RBI single.

Dodgers 9, Cardinals 4

In St. Louis, Los Angeles completed its first road series sweep of the season, downing St. Louis.

Juan Rivera homered and drove in three runs for the Dodgers, who notched their first three-game sweep in St. Louis since 1993.

Los Angeles starter Hiroki Kuroda (10-14) worked seven solid innings, allowing three runs and a walk.

Marlins 6, Reds 5, 1st game Reds 3, Marlins 2, 2nd game

In Miami, Omar Infante hit a go-ahead single in the eighth inning to edge Florida past Cincinnati in the first game of a double header which was prompted by the imminent threat of a hurricane.

It was decided to move Friday's scheduled game forward due to the expected arrival of Hurricane Irene in Florida.

Emilio Bonifacio tripled over the head of the center fielder with one out in the eighth off Jose Arrendondo (3-4). Bonifacio's head-first slide beat the throw at third. Infante followed with a single to left scoring Bonifacio to give the Marlins a 4-3 lead. Greg Dobbs added a two-run double in the inning.

Logan Morrison and Jose Lopez homered for the Marlins, who snapped a six-game losing streak.

Rockies 7, Astros 6, 10 innings

In Denver, Troy Tulowitzki scored from third on a wild pitch in the bottom of the 10th inning to give Colorado victory over Houston and a three-game sweep.

Tulowitzki reached on a walk and went to third on Jonathan Herrera's single. After an intentional walk, Astros reliever Anueury Rodriguez (1-5) uncorked a wild pitch and Tulowitzki trotted home with the winning run.

Mark Ellis had four hits, and Tulowitzki and Carlos Gonzalez homered for the Rockies, who have won five straight for the first time since April.

Pacquiao 'obviously' doesn't want fight—Mayweather

Floyd Mayweather Jr. claims that Manny Pacquiao will refuse his drug-testing demands because he has no interest in fighting him.

The last round of negotiations between the pair collapsed because Pacquiao refused to agree to Mayweather's request for Olympic-style sampling right up until the hours before the fight. Pacquiao claimed that having blood taken too close to entering the ring would sap too much of his strength, causing his performance to suffer.

But recently, the Pacquiao camp have given hints that the Filipino is willing to meet Mayweather's requirements, raising hopes that the much-anticipated super-fight, which will crown the planet's pound-for-pound king, could finally be on the cards. Pacquiao even went so far as to say: "I will fight Mayweather next year."

Manny Pacquiao has said he will fight Floyd Mayweather Jr. next year

However, Mayweather doubts whether Pacquiao is truly willing to play ball. "You've got to ask yourself this. I don't have anything against Manny Pacquiao. But is it Manny Pacquiao or Bob Arum [Pacquiao's promoter]?" Mayweather said to mlive.com.

"It is what it is. I'm not here to say nothing negative about Bob Arum. I'm not here to say nothing negative about Manny Pacquiao. He do what he do, I do what I do. All I ask, as a gentleman, let us both take the test and let's fight. It's obvious [Pacquiao] don't want to do it." (ESPN)

Ogumoro, who was also a member of the CNMI Team that went to Palau last year, will be participating in long and triple jump events in New Caledonia. He finished fourth in the long jump in the Micro Games with his 5.50 meters and fifth in triple jump (11.38m).

With the lack of on- and off-island competitions that could prepare them for the Pacific Games, NMA coaches decided to let the trio undergo weekly time trials besides their regular training sessions for three months.

"The training goes all the way until competition but their workload is reduced. Intensity though is high during this period," Rangamar said

"Strength is a big improvement in all three but they still need a lot of work on techniques, coordination, and mental preparation. These skills require years of work and repetition to be acquired. Just like team sports, running, jumping, and throwing are skills that take years to develop," the NMA coach answered when asked about the development of the three CNMI athletes since they started training in May.

Competition in medal-rich athletics will run from Sept. 3 to 10 at the Stade Numa Daly in Noumea.

"I have been lucky to play with Chris on several occasions throughout the years and looking back we've had a pretty good record together. We have been practicing and scrimmag-Speed, strength, skills are some of our strongest points. Chris is lightning fast," said Mister, who will be on his fourth Pacific Games appearance after competing in Guam in 1999, in Fiji in 2003, and in Samoa in 2007.

Mister teamed up with Mark McDonald in the 2007 Pacific Games in Apia and they lost to Tonga, Wallis & Futuna, and Guam. Tahiti took the gold after beating Fiji in three sets, 21-190, 18-21, 15-10.

Before going to New Caledonia, Mister and Nelson will have a stopover in Guam and

Patrick Reyes gave Tsunami Saipan the second win in the short distance races when he recorded the best time in the 20m butterfly at 14.70 seconds. He defeated teammates Min Seok (18.59) and Heong Joo Yoo (18.71 seconds). Another Tsunami Saipan bet, Riyana Camacho (21.43 seconds), broke into the Top 5 with Hong Kong's (20.41 seconds).

The 20m races are side events in the weekend meet Tsunami

A separate competition in the 40m swims took place with the Top 5 finishers in the preliminary races advancing to the A Finals and the sixth to 10th placers marching to the B Finals.

"Please make sure that once you register your U10 and U12 players, they will attend the clinic. Also, please let us know if your club can't fill the five slots so that we could give the vacant slots to the clubs that can," Salas said.

After the clinic, Miura will lead an All-Star selection in a game against the CNMI Men's National Team, starting at 6pm.

A total of 17 matches are listed on Trench Tech Purebred Promotions' Rites Of Passage 11: Onra scheduled for Sept. 9 at Saipan World Resort's Royal Tapa Hall.

The triple main event features Trench Tech's Fasi "Quickdraw" Jesse (7-3) taking on USA's Jonathan Gary (4-1) of the Reversal Gym's Yokohama Ground Slam team based in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma in a 155-lb catch-weight bout.

Jesse is going for his third win in a row since March of this year, while Gary is coming off a second round TKO victory in Japan's Gladiator 13 held in Tokyo this past January.

In addition, American Mixed Martial Artist, Will "The Kill" Chope (2-4), from Florida's Drag-on Muay Thai revisits Saipan to take on fellow lightweight Maitai "The Charger" Charley (3-7) of Marianas Elite.

Chope fought here this past March in ROP 10: Bad Intentions and lost his main event bout to Jesse via a third round head-and-arm triangle choke submission. He was initially paired against Trench Tech veteran Giovanni "Palaxi" Sablan (15-8), but his manager opted for Charley.

Charley's teammate Myron "The Natural" San Nicolas (5-2), meanwhile, will be pitted against Trench Tech's Mylo "AlabAMMA" Lassiter (2-0) in a super-heavyweight brawl.

As for Charley, he is also trying to bounce back from his loss against Trench Tech's "Badd" Brad Palacios this past June in Trench Warz 14: Ground Zero. The two battled it out for three exhausting rounds before Palacios won via split-decision.

The 245-lb San Nicolas has experience and 10 lbs over the undefeated young up-andcomer, but has not fought since November 2009.

Prior to the main events, a highly anticipated title fight between Trench Tech's Shane "Pikaboo" Alvarez and Maraians Elite's Derrick "El-Peligro" Rangamar takes over the cage.

Rangamar holds a 3-9 win-loss card, and although Alvarez is unbeaten in six fights. Rangamar is perhaps his first real opponent as all of Alvarez's previous challengers hold a combined record of just 4-13.

Last year, Rangamar went undefeated in two bouts and won an exhibition match over Palacios back in December. The pair clashed in April's Art Of War 6 Grappling and Submission challenge, with Alvarez having his hand raised via a sudden death takedown.

Other matchups in Rites Of Passage 11: Onra are the following:

■ Trench Tech's "Badd" Brad Palacios vs. Guam's Mike "The Attack" Limiac of United Kingdom's Tsunami Gym in a featherweight match;

■ Trench Tech's Ryan "Trobz" Ngirbabul vs. independent Derrick San Nicolas in a light heavyweight match;

Realistic expectations for NMI track team

REPORTER

The CNMI National Athletics Team will not be shooting for the moon and the stars when they compete in the 2011 Pacific Games in New Caledonia next week.

Northern Marianas Athletics development coach Elias Rangamar said they have modest expectations from Rachel Abrams, Trevor Ogumoro, and Douglas Dillay, who will be leaving Saipan this Sunday to represent the CNMI in the quadrennial meet.

"I'd say we have expectations rather than goals from them. I am not putting any pressure on these three, as far as medals are concerned. These three got selected about three months ago. Though they've been with the program for quite a while, they are actually not seasoned athletes in terms of competition," Rangamar said.

"We just don't have enough competition for them to get sharp before major meets. Their expectations are more in terms of getting personal best or making it to the second or third rounds," the NMA coach added.

Abrams, who has been in the program for about two years, but will be competing in her first off-island athletics event, will be racing in the 100m and 200m sprints. Her best times in these races are 12.71 seconds (100m) and 28.44 seconds (200m). She will also join the long jump event.

Dillay is entered in the 400m and 800m runs, and 400m hurdles. In the 400m and 800m
